Abbott, C: Conrad, M.D. When the century was new: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. c. 8–275 p. D cl., $1.

A story of New Jersey in the early years of the present century; the story turns upon the supposed murder of a man, who is found to be alive in the last chapter.

Abbott, Rev. Jacob. Rollo at play; il. by C: Copeland. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1897.] c. '55–'97. 2–191 p. S. (Children's favorite classics.) hf. cl., 75 c.

Abbott, Rev. Jacob. Rollo at work; il. by C: Copeland. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1897.] c. '55–'97. 191 p. S. (Children's favorite classics.) hf. cl., 75 c.

Abbott, Katharine M. Trolley trips on a Bay State triangle for sixty sunny days. Lowell, Mass., Katharine M. Abbott, 1897. c. 86 p. il. obl. Te. pap., 10 c.

Lowell may be called the apex of the triangle found in the Merrimac valley, covered with trolley roads running through an unusually beautiful country, rich in historical reminiscences. This little book, interestingly written, and gathering into a brief space descriptive details and much special information, is designed as a guide to the trolley traveller in search of pleasure. Among the towns embraced within its covers are Lawrence, Haverhill, Newburyport, Gloucester, Salem, Lynn, and Wakefield, with many smaller places. Illustrated with many views taken from photographs. With a description of the ride, the places at the stopping points to be seen are named. Includes a hotel directory and a tourists' directory of the towns.

Abbott, Lyman, D.D. The soul's quest after God. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1897.] c. 3–29 p. D. (What is worth while ser.) leatherette, 35 c.

Dr. Abbott believes that experience of personal communion with God and appreciation of the Divine presence, are far commoner than enjoyment of art, music, or literature. He assumes the trustworthiness of this universal human experience, and tries to aid those "who do but desire to see more clearly, or who have seen and desire to renew the vision."

Abbott, Lyman, D.D. The theology of an evolutionist. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 8+191 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A companion volume to "The evolution of Christianity" and "Christianity and social problems." It endeavors to indicate the direction in which modern thought is looking and ought to look for the interpretation of spiritual life. Its simple aim is to apply the fundamental principle of evolution (continuous, progressive change) to the problems of religious life and thought in a manner to be understood by the non-scholastic and non-professional reader. Treats the problems of creation, sacrifice, miracles, immortality, etc.

Abbott, Rev. T: Kingsmill. A critical and exegetical commentary on the Epistles to the Ephesians and to the Colossians. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 65+315 p. O. (International critical commentary.) cl., net, $2.50.

This commentary is primarily philological Its aim is to ascertain with as great precision as possible the actual meaning of the writers' language. The commentaries which have been regularly consulted are those of Chrysostom and Theodore of Mopsuestia, amongst the ancients; and amongst the moderns, Alford, Barry, De Wette, Eadie, Ellicott, Meyer, Moule, Macpherson, Lightfoot, and others

Aber, Mary R. Alling. An experiment in education: also the ideas which inspired it and were inspired by it. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 7+244 p. D. cl., $1.25

An account of experiments in teaching children that were made in a private school in Boston, Mass., and in a public school at Englewood, Ill. The experiments were an attempt to see how far the prevalent customs as to matter and method of teaching children are responsible for the unsatisfactory state of the mental life of adults.

About, Edmond François Valentin. Le roi des montagnes; ed. with introd. and notes by Arthur R. Ropes. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 8+292 p. 16°, cl., net, 50 c.

About, Edmond François Valentin. The king of the mountains; from the French by Mrs. Kingsbury. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1897. c. 246 p. D. cl., $1.

Hadji Stavros, called the King of the mountains, was, according to the German student, Hermann Schultz, who is supposed to be telling his history, a famous brigand, who lived on Mount Parnassus in the vicinity of Athens, terrorizing not only the Greeks, but also travellers from foreign countries Schultz tells of his own capture by the bandit giving a wonderful account of incidents worthy of the pen of Münchausen. The time is from 1840–1856. Written by About in 1856.

Academy notes (The), 1897; with il. of the principal pictures at Burlington House; originated by H: Blackburn. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 150 p. 8°, pap., 40 c.

Account showing the progress of the colony of Georgia in America from its first establishment; published per order of the honorable the trustees, London, printed in the year 1741; Maryland, reprinted and sold by Jonas Green, at his Printing Office in Annapolis, 1742. [Rochester, N. Y., G: P. Humphrey, 1897.] c. 5+66 p. O. (American colonial tracts, no. 5.) pap., 25 c.

Adams, F: Upham. President John Smith: the story of a peaceful revolution. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1897. c. '96. 5-290 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1; pap., 25 c.

This story begins on May 23, 1899, with a threatened anarchist riot in Chicago It is the beginning of the events which led to the election of John Smith—a plain American citizen—to the presidency of the United States. It is a story of a peaceful revolution; a tale of the triumph of the majority after a series of reverses It is a plea for majority rule The author is a free silverite. He dedicates his book to the American people with this sentiment: "The rights of the majority shall no longer be abridged."

Adams, G: Burton. The growth of the French nation. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. '96. 350 p. maps, por. D. cl., $1.25.

A rapid survey of French history, from a time more than a hundred years before the Christian era down to the end of the nineteenth century. The writer has endeavored to follow, as closely as possible, the line marked out by the title of the book, and to include only, according to the best of his judgment, the important facts which show the growth of the nation from age to age.

Adams, H: Carter. Economics and jurisprudence. N. Y., published for the American Economic Association by The Macmillan Co., 1897. 48 p. 8°, (Economic studies, v. 2, no. 1.) pap., net, 50 c.

Adams, Oscar Fay. A dictionary of American authors. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. '84, '97. 8+444 p. O. cl., $3.

An outgrowth of the writer's "Handbook of American authors," first published in 1884, several features of which the judgment of the public having approved being retained. The work contains more than six thousand names in alphabetical order, with date and place of birth and date of death (if dead), chief works, etc.

Adams, Oscar Fay. The story of Jane Austen's life. New illustrated ed. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1897. c. '91, '96. 2+279 p. pors. il. O. cl., $2.

The distinguishing feature of this new edition is furnished by the eighteen illustrations scattered through the volume; they are places associated either with Jane Austen's life or with her books. The bibliography has been extended and now covers seven pages.

Adams, S. H. Sewer flushing diagrams for the use of engineers, surveyors, etc., (from actual tests made principally upon pipe sewers,) showing how far the discharge from a flush tank will give a self cleansing velocity. N. Y., Spon & Chamberlain, 1897. size 10 x 13½ in., cl., net, $5.

Adams, W. I. Lincoln, ed. Sunlight and shadow: a book for photographers, amateur and professional; il. by original photographs from nature. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., [1897.] c. 6-141 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

Articles and illustrations by the best authorities on photographic landscape and studio art taken from the Photographic Times, the American Annual of Photography, and other sources; some are by Mr. Adams, others by J. Wells Champney, Alfred Stieglitz, and equally well-known writers. The following topics are discussed and illustrated: The choice of subject; Landscape without figures; Landscape with figures; Foregrounds; The sky; Outdoor portraits and groups; The hand camera; Instantaneous photography; Winter photography; Marines; Photography at night; Lighting in portraiture; Photographing children; Art in grouping

Adams, W: Taylor, ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] At the front. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1897. c. 4-487 p. il. D. (The blue and the gray ser. - on land, no. 5.) cl., $1.50.

The last volume but one of the series. It continues the narrative of the preceding books; the Riverlawn Regiment is ordered to Murfreesboro', taking part in the battle of Stone River, which is effectively described. The book is full of exciting incidents and adventure of the well-known characters of the series.

Adams, W: Taylor, ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] Getting an indorser, and other stories. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [1897.] c. '75. 2+80 p. D. (Hearthstone ser.) cl., 50 c.

Explains that prevailing scientific ideas are regarded by the mass of people of any period, and even by learned professors, as established facts, and how important a factor the scepticism of the few is in bringing about new adjustment of proved facts and new theories for testing those still improved. This pamphlet readjusts some generally received astronomical doctrines which in their new form explain variations in the earth's motion, in gravitation, and other natural laws.

The story of a very good boy, who is the victim of a wicked stepmother He is driven from home and seeks his fortune in the west. He never tells lies and is always brave, and by the exercise of these virtues he becomes great and prosperous, and finally recovers the property his enemy has for a time kept from him. The story starts in New England, but ends in St. Louis.

Alien, (pseud.) In golden shackles. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. '96. 4+328 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In the North Island of New Zealand an English schoolmaster, having the care of his motherless boy and girl, yields to the temptation of drink. He injures his boy in drunken passion A physician adopts the boy, whose love is estranged by his father's wickedness. The father takes his little girl and crosses to the South Island, where he meets wild companions and braves all things for gold. Through his sins a young man is cast in jail and becomes a paralytic. The little girl remains "pure gold" among her surroundings, and all her thoughts and actions are for the good of others. The point of the story seems to be that all men must be judged leniently, that crime is chiefly disease.

Life near Lexington, Ky., in the year 1795, is the theme. The chief character is John Gray, a schoolmaster, who is in love with the niece of Mrs. Falconer, a pretty shallow girl, who throws him over for another man. Gray afterward loves Mrs. Falconer, who has a good husband and is older than he. They separate, however, and John marries another woman. Several years ago the author wrote a book called "John Gray," of which this is an artistic elaboration.

The boys of "The Camp and Tramp Club" who figured in "Lost on Umbagog" and in "The Mammoth hunters" are the heroes of this story. They plan to spend a summer in Australia, but on the voyage there are wrecked in the Pacific Ocean, and cast ashore upon the island of New Guinea, the book tells of the flowers and plants, animals, natives, etc., of the island, and describes how the boys are found and brought home.

Allingham, Francis. Crooked paths. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1897. 5+279 p. D. cl., $1.75.

A story of which the keynote seems to be "the sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation." The form is autobiographic, but the chronicler lives at three different times As a very young man he is a victim to the wiles of a common young French woman In his next life he marries a wonderful violinist, and dies young of consumption, leaving a son. This son's inherited evil tendencies bring sorrow to honest farm laborers, and this part is told by the spirit of the father, who suffers as he sees his evil ways perpetuated.

Alpers, W: C. The pharmacist at work. Phil., J. B Lippincott Co., 1898 [1897.] c. '97. 4+320 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"There is no intention to present a complete or systematically grouped delineation of the science or art of pharmacy; nor is the book expected to replace or supersede any other existing work. Its main object is to depict, through the means of examples drawn from actual occurrence, the necessity of combining theoretical knowledge with practical experience in order to meet the many emergencies of our profession; further, to place before the older pharmacists a model of how they may effectively instruct their apprentices, and, finally, to teach the younger ones to learn and study, and how to apply book learning to their daily work."—Preface.

Altsheler, Jos. A. A soldier of Manhattan and his adventures at Ticonderoga and Quebec. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 6+316 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 225.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A young soldier of the Royal American troops tells his experiences during the French and Indian war. The descriptions of New York and Albany of that day are full of interest. The great battle in which Wolfe and Montcalm fell is vividly described. A character somewhat on the order of Cooper's "Spy" early takes a fancy to the hero, and befriends him throughout in the most dangerous moments of his career. Love for a French maiden plays an important part in the young man's career, and when the French are beaten she remains a willing captive to the yonng American officer.

Believed to be the first effort to bring within schoolroom scope and school-book form the latest discoveries of language students about English. After Trench and White and Skeat, the author is indebted to Whitney and Emerson; and Prof Jackson, of Columbia University, has allowed the use of his table for distinguishing word-origins at sight.

Anderson, Rob. The silence of God. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. 4+199 p. O. cl., $1.75.

The Assistant Commissioner of Police of London is certainly in a position to tell of the wrongs and sufferings that "cry to Heaven," only to be met by absolute silence. He voices the difficulties and doubts to which no thoughtful person is a stranger. The standpoint from which he justifies the apparent neglect of God is the teaching of Christ, which promised nothing of the comfort and happiness of this world. He thinks people have grown to look at the world from a Christian standpoint they have made for themselves, which is diametrically opposed to everything Christ like. The book is an arraignment of scepticism, and an almost severer arraignment of organized and formulated Christianity.

The story of Una Hope is of the development of a woman whose one passion is the simple natural one for love and home. The death of her mother takes away early in the story the only entirely sympathetic companion of Una's life. Una searches for companionship. She studies and works and lives, and meets her three lovers; the first when she is a young girl, the others when she is a wiser and stronger woman. How she meets them and how she tests them the story tells.

Atherton, Mrs. Gertrude Franklin, ["Frank Lin," pseud.] His fortunate grace. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 4+210 p. S. cl., $1.
The story of the young Duke of Bosworth, who came to New York in search of a rich wife. He succeeds in winning Augusta Forbes, a plain but intellectual girl, whose father is a millionaire many times over. Mr. Forbes objects to his daughter marrying the Duke, but Mrs. Forbes carries her daughter off to England, announces the engagement, and Mr. Forbes acknowledges himself defeated, and makes settlements of several millions on the young people.

Atherton, Mrs. Gertrude Franklin, ["Frank Lin," pseud.] Patience Sparhawk and her times: a novel. N. Y., J: Lane, 1897. c. 3+418 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The heroine is offered as a new and strong type of the American woman. She is born in California of a disreputable mother and a Yankee father of considerable education. When her parents die she comes to New York, marries a rich man and leaves him when she finds she no longer loves him; engages in newspaper work, returns to nurse her husband through a serious illness, in which he dies from an overdose of morphine. She is accused of poisoning him, tried for her life, and though innocent, pronounced guilty. The lawyer who defends her learns to love her deeply and exhausts every method to save her. She is already in the electric chair at Sing Sing, when a woman's confession snatches her from death.

Atkinson, Philip. The elements of electric lighting; including electric generation, measurement, storage, and distribution. 9th ed. rev. and enl. N. Y., D. Van Nostrand Co., 1897. c. '88, '97. 6+279 p. D. cl., $1.50.
Important changes made in the construction of dynamos within the last five years have rendered a complete and thorough revision of chapters three and four necessary, since most of the dynamos described in the first edition have gone out of use, and new dynamos, chiefly of the multipolar type and designed for heavier work, have taken their place. The latter are described in full. Two new kinds of storage batteries have been described, instead of two which have gone out of use. A brief description of vacuum tube lighting has also been introduced, and important additions made to the description of arc lamps, transformers, and electric units.

Aubrey, Frank. The devil-tree of El Dorado: a novel; il. by Leigh Ellis and F: Hyland. N. Y., New Amsterdam Bk. Co., [1897.] c. 20+392 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The mysterious city of Roraima, situated in or near Venezuela, is the scene of most of the happenings in this romance of adventure. It is discovered by two young English naturalists, in company with an unknown fellow-traveller called Monella, who on their arrival are received by the people as gods. They are soon menaced by the malignant high priest, Coryon, who plans to sacrifice them to the terrible "devil-tree," the fearful fetish of Roraima, and his schemes, their apparent success and final overthrow, furnish a series of exciting incidents.

The story begins with Mr. Gordon, a West Virginia farmer, showing to his children the bills and gold and silver he has received for the sale of a mountain on his farm. This leads to a description of our currency. By an accident an inkstand is overturned and the bills soaked with ink. One of the boys goes to Washington to have the notes replaced with good ones. From here on we have discussed the subjects of the railway mail and postal service, the making of coin in the Philadelphia Mint, our foreign mail service, and an account of our post-office and postage stamps, our banking system, our revenue system, etc., etc.

The influences surrounding a boy and two girl cousins in a rectory in Lincolnshire, England, where secular interests were paramount with spiritual, shaped their characters. The boy devoted himself to literature, one girl married, one became devoted to church work. The scene shifts to London, and the chief character, a popular preacher, is introduced. His health fails, and he is sent to a smaller parish in the country, where he fights out his own salvation, learning little by little the relative importance of character, events, temperament, forms of belief, etc. The motto is, "And failure is God's only road to success." By the author of "Maris Stella."

Co., 1897. 8+282 p. il. D. (Lippincott's select novels, no. 194.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.
The time of the story is the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The scene is Dartmoor. Eldad Guavas, holding a miner's claim, is unjustly accused of cheating the Crown of its dues, and is condemned in accordance to the Stannary laws of Edward I. (1288) to be pinioned to a post by a knife thrust through his right palm Guavas is rescued from his horrible position by a bailiff's daughter, and her part in the historic novel is thereafter interesting.

In the time of the story it was the custom of the people of Nemausas (now Nîmes) to propitiate the God Nemausas, supposed to be the deity who supplied the city with water, by offering every seven years a human sacrifice. Perpetua, a Christian maiden, is chosen, and after certain Pagan rites is cast into the fountain, but is rescued a few moments later by a brave young Roman. Perpetua's singularly interesting and sad history thereafter is told, special stress being laid on her martyrdom, and on the action of the Deacon Baudillas, likewise enrolled a Christian martyr.

The story purports to be the memoirs of a sailor, John Hurdiss, which are discovered by the editor and published. It begins with John's boyhood, and it is shown from the start that there is some mystery about his family, it being intimated that he belongs to the French nobility. He goes to Stonington after his mother's death and lives for a time with an eccentric uncle, a Frenchman. From there he runs away to sea, is captured in a naval engagement, taken to England as a prisoner, escapes, and falls among Frenchmen, who turn out to be his relatives, and has many other adventures.

Barr, Mrs. Amelia Edith. The king's highway. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. 6+371 p. D. cl., $1.25.
According to Christian in the "Pilgrim's progress," "The king's highway" is the way of "holiness" One of the vexed questions dealt with, in a novel which introduces the teachings of Christian socialism, is the marrying of wealthy Americans to titled and impecunious foreigners Nicholas Lloyd, a Wall Street speculator, having been bitterly disappointed at his son's refusal to join him in financial schemes, consoles himself by thinking that his daughter will help in the furtherance of plans for her social future. Other influences are the cause of the girl's acting in a more interesting way. Organized labor, and theories about labor and capital, are incidentally discussed.

Barr, Mrs. Amelia Edith. Prisoners of conscience. N. Y., The Century Co., 1897. c. '96, '97. 6+240 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
The scene is laid in the Shetland Islands; the characters are fisher-folk. These people are brought up in the strictest tenets of Calvinism, hedged about, as the author says, with the "phantoms of a gloomy creed." It is this fact which explains the title of the story A tragedy enters the life of the hero and heroine, and through its influence there are brought to them the comfort and the consolation that a milder faith has drawn from the scriptures. The story was published in briefer form in The Century Magazine. Several chapters have been added as now presented.

Barr, Rob., ["Luke Sharp," pseud.] The mutable many. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., 1897. c. '96. 5+372 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The two most important characters are introduced in the factory of Monkton & Hope, London, while discussing an impending strike, namely Mr Sartwell, manager of the works, and Marsten, a workman, who speaks in the interests of the union; Mr. Sartwell refusing to meet the demands of the union, the strike follows. Incidents caused by this event are described; the positions of both labor and capital are viewed impartially, and the weakness of unions is claimed to be the blind following of the many of a few leading spirits.

A story of the time of Nero; this corrupt emperor is shown in the midst of his profligate court, prematurely old and broken in health from his excesses. The burning of Rome aroused popular fury to such an extent that to avert suspicion from himself he accuses the Christians of the crime and orders their extermination. The persecutions which follow are directed against several of the characters of the story, notably Mercia, a Christian, who is loved by Marcus, a young patrician and Prefect of Rome. The story is taken from the play of the same name, by Wilson Barrett

Barton, W: E. A hero in homespun: a tale of the loyal south. Bost., Lamson, Wolffe & Co, 1897. c. 8+393 p. il O. cl., $1.50

To extend popular knowledge of the Civil War as it affected a large but almost unrecognized body of the people, this story was written Tennessee and Kentucky were divided in sentiment on the subject of separating from the Union when the call to arms came in 1861. The sufferings entailed upon the men who remained staunch to the United States flag, and the sufferings endured by those who conscientiously joined their southern brethren are vividly pictured. The author dwells upon the great need of charity in judging those to whom the war involved such momentous choices as it did to the people of the south

Mr Bellamy in this work uses the same framework with some of the characters of his former story "Looking backward," as a starting point, and also the same year 2000. "Equality" is largely an amplification of the theories of "Looking backward," depicting an Arcadian condition of life and government in the twentieth century, resulting from a revolution in our own day against wealth, monopolies, corrupt governments, etc., etc. Our own politics are sharply criticised, and their weak points exposed.

Bellsmith, H: Wentworth. Henry Cadavere: a study of life and work. N. Y., Commonwealth Co., [1897.] c. 4–239 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Henry Cadavere adopted his name because he was dead to the existing social conditions. He was an agnostic of strongly religious temperament. He became an advocate of true socialism, co-operation, nationalism, humanitarianism, and after long experience declared all these theories were embraced in the teachings of Jesus Christ, and that the human Christ was the highest prototype a reformer could imagine. Descriptions of existing co-operative societies are appended. In a commonwealth called Nazareth the hero accomplished his life-work.

The great Napoleon is supposed to have left a great-grandson, the issue of a marriage contracted by him when very young and unknown. This young man was brought up and educated in London under the name of Walter Sadler. At about the age of thirty he goes to Paris to seek his fortune, and is there recognized by his wonderful likeness to his great progenitor. There is a coup d état in his favor, and Sadler becomes Napoleon IV. His reign lasts but a few months, and is of the most ignominious character. He shows no ability in any direction, his ministers govern him for their own profit, and finally he gets into a disgraceful affair with a noble English girl.

Bickford, Luther. H., and Powell, R: Stillman. Phyllis in Bohemia; il. by Orson Lowell. Chic., Herbert S. Stone & Co., 1897. c. 2–333 p. S. cl., $1.25.

A country girl named Phyllis, tired of an ideal existence in a rural locality, referred to in the story as Arcadia, and longing to be brought in touch with the life of Bohemia, appeals to her betrothed, who gratifies his sweetheart by settling in a New York house, which is literally filled with aspirants to artistic or litterary fame Through association with the "poet lariat," the boy poet Vedo Verner, the coming Duse, and other types which are cleverly portrayed, Phyllis learns that in Bohemia hopes are seldom realized, hence a return to Arcadia.

Bicknell, Anna L. The story of Marie-Antoinette. N. Y., The Century Co., 1897. c. 14+334 p. por. il O. cl., $3.

The success of Miss Bicknell's "Life in the Tuileries under the second empire" marked her out as the one writer to retell, in popular form, the pathetic story of Marie-Antoinette. The gayety and happiness of the early years of her reign gave way to misery, humiliation, and physical suffering, followed by a violent death. The lights and shadows of this most unhappy life are vividly brought out in Miss Bicknell's fluent narrative Mme Vigée Lebrun's charming portraits of the queen and other members of the court circle add greatly to the embellishment of the volume Bicknell, Frank M. The apprentice boy; or, learning the business; il. by G: Foster Barnes. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1897.] c. 6–213 p. sq. O. cl., $1.25.

The story of Willis Mudge, a boy of nineteen, who obtains a position in a wholesale house, with an opportunity to learn the business. All sorts of tricks are played upon him at first by his associates, and he falls quite innocently into trouble. There is a mystery about his father, who had been shot in a mutiny at sea, that is cleared up.

Blackmore, R: Doddridge. Dariel: a romance of Surrey; with drawings by Chris Hammond. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. '96–'97. 5+505 p. il. D. cl., $1.75.

A thorough-going old-fashioned romance, of which the scene at first is Surrey, England, in the early fifties, but which shifts to the wilds of the Caucasus, and shows strikingly the rough and reckless daring and fierce semi-civilization which characterize its inhabitants The story is historical to some extent, and recalls the hopeless struggle of these Eastern peoples with the Czar of Russia in those days. First the hero tells the story, then the father of the heroine tells his tale of war, love, peace, crime, revenge, and exile. The author's deep learning in classical literature and his characteristic love of dogs both show to fine effect in the story.

In three parts. The first traces the development of the missionary idea and spirit in the church itself, from apostolic times to the present The second takes up the different fields, sketching the progress of both their occupation and development. In the third part the organization and methods adopted in the prosecution of the work are set forth as they have developed historically, from the very simple forms of the apostolic age to the more elaborate system now in use.

Bliss, W: Dwight Porter, ed. The encyclopædia of social reform; including political economy, political science, sociology, and statistics, covering anarchism, charities, civil service, currency, land and legislation, reform, penology, socialism, social purity, trades unions, woman suffrage, etc. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1897 c. 7+1439 p. O. cl., net, $7.50; shp., $9.50; hf. mor., $12; mor., $14.

"The two main requisites of an encyclopædia are reliability and serviceableness in information. The first of these requisites has been sought in this encyclopædia by having every article either written or revised by some specialist on each particular subject. In the case of all proposed reforms the statement of the reform has been written, or at least revised, by a believer in the reform; but, together with this, or by reference to a corresponding article on the opposing side, a statement of the opposing view will be found. Individualists and socialists, gold monometallists, bimetallists, and believers in free silver, protectionists and free traders, prohibitionists and high-license advocates, believers and disbelievers in woman suffrage, appear in this encyclopædia side by side. Historical, bibliographical, biographical, and statistical articles have been prepared and carefully revised by adequate authorities, mainly university professors and specialists."—Preface.

Blodgett, Mabel Fuller. At the queen's mercy; il. by H: Sandham. Bost., Lamson, Wolffe & Co., 1897. c. 6+261 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

After four months' irksome traffic in ivory and gum two friends found themselves in the interior of Africa disgusted with their surroundings. Suddenly a runaway slave appeared, wounded by a poisoned arrow In dying he implored burial according to the rites of Hed and Edba, in whose temple he had once been a priest. In return he told them the secret of the woman, the treasure, and the secret way. The book relates their adventures with cannibals and rival factions of priests before the woman is found and rescued after they had both long been "at the queen's mercy."

The Waldenses living in the Alpine valleys, between Mount Cenis and Mount Viso, reject the theory of historians that their sect was founded in the twelfth century by Peter Waldo, believing that they have lived in Italy from time immemorial. In a brief history, introducing customs and traditions, there is an effort to show the antiquity of the primitive people, and to honor their steadfastness. The cruel persecutions of the Church of Rome are described. Index.

The problems are classified under the headings corresponding to the different divisions of physics (gravity, heat, pressure, etc.) to which they are related The general formulæ are prepared by explanations, but no attempt is made at demonstrations, these belonging properly to the study of physics itself. In an appendix are problems given at examinations by the University of the State of New York The solution of some of these problems is given, and references are made to similar problems already treated.

Bouvet, Marguerite. A little house in Pimlico; il. by Helen Maitland Armstrong. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1897. c. 7-245 p. O. cl., $1.50.

A beautiful young woman and her pretty young son lived in the "little house in Pimlico." She was the widow of a young English captain who had been killed in India, and the boy, Sedley Hamilton, was their only child, born the day his father died. Captain Hamilton had married against his uncle's wishes. The uncle is a cross, crabbed old fellow, but very rich It is a long time before he will see the boy Sedley. The story shows how the little fellow winds himself into the old man's heart and is made his heir.

Bower, Marian. The story of Mollie. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1897. c. 2+153 p. D. cl., $1.

A pathetic story of a little plain, sensitive, reticent girl, misunderstood by every one but a father whom she had adored and lost. Her mother is a pretty, shallow woman, who wishes Mollie were like other children, and who bestows upon Mollie's pretty baby brother all the affection she possesses. A cousin of Mollie's father comes to stay at the Dower House, and to him the child transfers the love of her intense nature. The ending is a double tragedy.

Bower, W: Frank. Specifications: a practical system for writing specifications for buildings. N. Y., E: A. MacLean, 1896. c. '94. 4+224 p. Q. buckram, $5.

The purpose of this work is to furnish in ready shape a correct and comprehensive skeleton from which to prepare the specifications for all the work which would enter into a building. The arrangement of the work is excellent. It begins with a complete summary of the items to be considered, arranged in the order they would naturally follow in the writing. Following this is the detailed specification, printed on alternate pages, and elaborated as far as is possible for general conditions. On the odd pages, opposite the various items, are memoranda in regard to requirements, building laws, special data, strength of materials, etc. The book concludes with a very full index.

Bowne, Borden Parker. Theory of thought and knowledge. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 13+389 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The author is Professor of Philosophy in Boston University. He expounds and recommends a certain way of looking at the problems of thought and knowledge. The author specially emphasizes the volitional and practical nature of belief and the almost universal illusion arising from the structural fallacies of uncritical thought. The root thought of the work is that thought is an organic activity which unfolds from within, and can never be put together mechanically from without. Much of the material has already been given in the author's former works on "The philosophy of theism" and "The introduction to psychological theory"

The autobiography of a man of eighty, whose life has been spent in this country and in England, and who has had many unusual experiences. Hezekiah Brake was born in England in 1815, and after a varied career as shopkeeper, footman, etc, he married and came to America in 1847. He landed in Canada, then came to the eastern states, and in a little while went south; he engaged in many kinds of business, often losing everything he possessed through the dishonesty of others; the last forty years of his life have been spent in the west—thirty-eight in Kansas, where he lived through the late war. As a pioneer he witnessed exceptional phases of life, which he describes with raciness and humor.

After spending a year or less in the study of elementary grammar with exercises and in the reading of easy literary prose the student of German is not ready to take up a special scientific monograph or a large text-book in one of the sciences. This compilation aims to bridge over this gap, and has mainly in view the needs of students of chemistry, physics, geology, including mineralogy and biology, with its subdivisions of zoölogy and botany. The vocabulary is intended to contain every word in the text, simple or compound, literary or technical.

The hero, who is known throughout simply as "the Scientist," is a young European of wealth and position, devoted to scientific pursuits. He pays a long visit, with a view to making an anthropological, meteorological, topographical, geological, zoological, and botanical study of them and their habitat, to the chief settlement of the Baja tribe of Pima Indians in northern Mexico, about whom next to nothing has ever been known by the outside world. Here the heroine, a young Piman maiden, Ampharita ("The silent one") by name, becomes his guide, attendant, and assistant on specimen-gathering expeditions, and his aid in preserving and arranging the booty, as well as his servant in every-day life. The information concerning the Pimas and their country is entirely authentic.

The story of a young man with a disgraceful past, who is given a chance to reform in a new position secured him by his uncle's influence in a lumber company in a town on the Cumberland River. He meets a refined woman here, and they fall in love with each other. She learns his story from a rival, but concludes to marry him, thinking it her mission to reform him; but after a time he is found out in another swindle, and she gives him up. The fact that in order to raise up those who have fallen we are not bound to sacrifice ourselves is strongly brought out.

The book has been very thoroughly gone over by the author with the assistance of two of his friends who are intimately acquainted with Transcaucasia as it is at this moment, and all of the considerable changes which have taken place in the last eighteen years are noted in brackets so as to prevent misconception as to the facts of to-day One chapter has been dealt with in detail, the one devoted to the Armenian question. Mr. Bryce leaves untouched the chapter which in the earlier issues of his book dealt with this subject and has composed a new supplementary chapter which contains a sketch of the history of the Armenians in their relations to the Turks, and of the Sultan in his relations to Great Britain and Russia, during these eighteen years.

The work is written from the judicial standpoint of the constitutional lawyer rather than that of the politician or the philanthropist. It is not only written exclusively from the sources, but the view it takes of the great slavery controversy, of which it is at once the chronicle and commentary, distinguishes it among the histories of the period for its impartiality and its clear appreciation of the motives and conduct of both sides. Prof. Burgess is professor of history, political science, and constitutional law in Columbia University. Little is told of Clo' Wildairs' second husband in "A lady of quality." We only know that he was the Duke of Osmonde, and that she was supremely happy with him. The present story tells of his birth, his growth and manhood, of the first time he met Clorinda Wildairs, and how his fancy returned again and again to her. While he is in France with the great Marlborough she marries, but in time becomes a widow, when he asks her to be his wife. The story repeats many of the scenes of "A lady of quality," as seen from the Duke's point of view, and shows that he learned her secret about Sir John Oxon.

Fernitta, the heroine, is the daughter of the King and Queen of Fairyland, who was condemned by a malicious fairy to become a mortal; this fate is realized, while Fernitta is still a child, then the princess disappears from Fairyland; she returns, however, some years later, determined to institute a system of modern reform. Fairyland is thereafter seen under the effects of modern law, civil government, an L. A W. society, and other political and social institutions introduced. First published by Arena Pub. Co., now published by Lothrop Pub Co

Burns, Rob. Complete poetical works. Cambridge ed. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., [1897.] c. 66+397 p. por. O. cl., $2.

The important material contained in the Centenary Burns is embodied in the present edition; it has been rearranged and edited with the utmost care on the same plan that has proved so acceptable in the Cambridge editions of Longfellow, Whittier, etc. Special pains have been taken to secure a strictly accurate text. Preceding the text is a biographical and critical essay by W. E. Henley, the valuable notes of T F. Henderson elucidate the text, while there are indexes to titles and first lines, glossary, etc.

Burr, Enoch Fitch, D.D. Fabius the Roman; or, how the church became militant. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., [1897.] c. 8+388 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The story deals with the time in the fourth century, when Constantine embraced the Christian religion, and the seat of the Roman government was changed to Constantinople Fabius, a Roman Tribune, instructed the persecuted Christians that their policy of nonresistance had become weakness, and under his guidance they became a militant and aggressive power instead of a martyrized sect. By the author of "Aleph the Chaldean."

Burrage, E. Harcourt. The vanished yacht. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1898 [1897.] 4-358 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Two yachts, the Daphne and the Iris were in the harbor of Little Crampton, England, ready to sail to the Mediterranean with their owners; a terrific storm comes up, and after it clears away the Daphne is missing The owner, fortunately, was on shore, and after investigation finds a clue to his yacht It is believed one of the crew, a Spaniard, has stolen it to go in search of a buried treasure. The Iris starts in chase of the Daphne to the South American coast, and has many startling adventures.

Burton, Alma Holman. Massasoit: a romantic story of the Indians of New England. N. Y., The Morse Co., 1896. c. 270 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The story of the disappearance of the red man from New England. Massasoit was chief of the tribe of Wampanoags; the character of the Indians, their mode of life, dress and customs, folk-lore, etc., are described; several chapters are devoted to the early colonial life of the Puritans.

Burton, Isabel Baker, (Lady,) and Wilkins, W. H. The romance of Isabel Lady Burton, the story of her life, told in part by herself and in part by W. H. Wilkins. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. 2 v., 15+374; 7+375-778 p. pors. il. fac-similes, O. cl., $7.50.

Lady Burton was the wife of Sir Richard Burton, the famous Orientalist and explorer; his literal translation of "The Arabian nights" is best known to scholars for whom his translation of 'The scented garden" was also made. Lady Burton destroyed the ms. of the latter immediately after his death, the act giving rise to endless reproachful letters and communications. The true story of the burning is told in her own words, and her real motives for doing so. The work includes the romantic story of her love and marriage, and her travels and adventures in South America, the Syrian Desert, the Holy Land, Arabia, Egypt, India, and elsewhere.

The narrative follows the "zigzag" plan of interpolated stories, historical incidents, anecdotes, poems and pictures, intended to aid in a better understanding of the country travelled through. The journey described is from Boston to Southampton, England, thence to Buenos Ayres, and across the Cordillera by the Transadine railroad and by mule to the west coast, where a study is made of the principal countries. Two boys and a girl accompany an old merchant sea-captain in the journey

Butterworth, Hezekiah. True to his home: a tale of the boyhood of Franklin; il. by H. Winthrop Peirce. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 9+322 p. O. cl., $1.50.

"This volume" according to the author, "is an historical fiction, but the place of it was suggested by biography, and is made to include the most interesting and picturesque episodes in the home side of the life of Benjamin Franklin, so as to form a connected narrative or picture of his public life."

Butts, Edmund L. Manual of physical drill United States army. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 5+175 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The object of the manual is to systematize physical training in the army, to furnish a practical guide that will enable any officer to give regular and beneficial instruction to his command. Illustration is largely used as being the simplest mode of description. In such drills as the rifle, dumb-bells, etc, the sets of exercises are more or less similar, and are all adapted to either set of music given. Simple and progressive exercises on the different apparatus, and the principles of wall scaling, climbing, etc., etc, are also given.

Cabot, Mrs. Elizabeth Lyman. In plain air. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1897. c. 2+296 p. D. cl., $1.25.

After ten years of travel in Europe Marion Clayton returned to her home in Brookfield, an eastern city, in which several generations of her ancestors had lived. Her standards had so changed and broadened that her life and actions at once obtain serious criticism from the narrow-minded people of Brookfield. She extends sympathy and help to several persons Brookfield society had ostracized, and is at once the centre of observation and a mark for scandal. Her love-story closes the narrative.

Caine, T: H: Hall. The Christian: a story. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. '96, '97. 5+540 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The dangers and temptations of London life, especially for women of the working class and the very poor, find illustration in a very modern and strongly dramatic story, which takes up many of the social problems of the day, showing how little progress the churches have made in dealing with them Glory Quayle and John Storm, whose stories intermingle throughout, come from the Isle of Man to London seeking a larger sphere of usefulness. Glory, a beautiful, high-spirited girl, becomes an hospital nurse, then a music-hall singer, and later an actress. Her emotional temperament exposes her to many temptations, but though often on the brink of the precipice, she preserves her honor. John Storm is a clergyman, at first of the established church, and in the end the "Christian socialist," who is arrested for disturbing the peace, and whose life is sacrificed to his ideal.

Capes, B. E. J. The mill of silence. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1897. c. '96. 2–348 p. D. cl., $1.
"The mill of silence" was in Winton, Hampshire, England; it was the abode of a drunken miller and his three sons, who lived in comparative peace and happiness until the advent of a strange waif, who called herself "Zyp the changeling"; on her account the brothers became jealous of each other, and Renault, believing himself guilty of crime, goes to London. He tells of his strange life there, describing a tragedy in which his eldest brother figured, and finally discloses the secret of the silent chamber in the Winton mill.

Carey, Rosa Nouchette. Doctor Luttrell's first patient. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. c. '96. 322 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
Doctor Luttrell, a young physician, had established himself in Galvaston Terrace, London, where he was anxiously awaiting professional calls; an aged neighbor slipping on the sidewalk when Mrs. Luttrell was present, she sent for her husband. The doctor's experiences with his refractory patient take up most of a story in which a prodigal son plays the usual part.

Carlyle, T: Montaigne, and other essays, chiefly biographical; now first collected, with foreword by S. R. Crockett. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. 14+297 p. por. O. cl., $3.
These essays were contributed by Thomas Carlyle to Brewster's Edinburgh Encyclopædia between 1820 and 1823, and they have not previously appeared in book form. S. R. Crockett has written a foreword, in which he rather deprecates the publishing of these very youthful and unfinished essays. They will give no new information as to Carlyle's mental development. One on Montucla has not hitherto been noticed by bibliographers.

Carlyle, T: On heroes and hero-worship and the heroic in history; ed., with notes and introd., by Mrs. Annie Russell Marble. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. 36+417 p. D. cl., 80 c.
Sixty pages of notes clear up many allusions to mythology, philosophy, history of all ages, with which Carlyle's work abounds; also many obscure quotations. An introduction furnishes a sketch of his life. This is followed by a literary summary and bibliography (6 p.).

Catherwood, Mrs. Mary Hartwell. The days of Jeanne D'Arc. N. Y., The Century Co., 1897. c. 6+278 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.50.

Mrs Catherwood has made a close study of the life and times of the Maid of Domrémy. Her Jeanne is no military maid, but a timid, loving, tender child—a child devout and single minded, and possessed with the passionate devotion of her sex and creed, fired by love of country. The spirit in which she has approached her task is shown by the following from her preface: "This book is the outcome of many months of patient study and collection of material in America, the revisal and rejection of much of this in Paris, of journeys over the Maid's country, and her path from Domrémy to Rouen, in voitures, on foot, in carts, of a character-study of the fifteenth century, and, at the risk of moving a smile, I will confess it as the result of a divine hint."

Chamberlain, Houston Stewart. Richard Wagner; tr. from the German by G. Ainslie Hight, and rev. by the author; with photogravures and collotypes, facsimiles and engravings. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. 17+402 p. F. cl., $7.50.

Considers Richard Wagner from four different points of view. The first chapter contains a sketch of his life; the second deals with his theoretical writings, and is by far the clearest and ablest exposition of his views that has yet appeared. They are arranged under four headings: 1, Wagner's political views; 2, His philosophy; 3 His doctrine of regeneration, 4, His doctrine of art. The third chapter treats of his dramatic works; and the fourth, headed "Bayreuth," gives a history of the growth of the idea of festival performances, with a discussion of the aims and tendencies of his whole life, summed up under the title, "The Bayreuth idea." The illustrations are a special feature of the work.

Chapin, Anna Alice. The story of the Rhinegold (Der Ring des Nibelungen) told for young people. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 20+138 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Although written for young people the book will make interesting reading for people of any age, and is especially useful as an interpreter of the operas themselves. It is divided into parts which correspond to the operas. Miss Chapin, in an introductory, part, has given a remarkably clear idea in a few words of the very complicated series of traditions from which Wagner made his operas, and the same clearness runs through the account, which is lightened frequently by the more important "music motifs."

Charrington, C: A sturdy beggar. N. Y., Stone & Kimball, 1896. c. 163 p. nar. S. cl , $1.25.

The sturdy beggar is a young sculptor who after years of toil finds himself in his London studio trying to finish a statue ordered by the Somerville Parish Council. Having started his work as a representation of "Prudence," he is afterwards ordered to make it stand for "Generosity," and later still for "Chastity." He becomes disgusted and quits work He is visited in his dejection by an artist escaped from an insane asylum, who advises him to destroy his work and never to work for money. The end is merely suggested by the writer, but readers must infer that the long struggle with poverty turned the brain of the sturdy beggar also.

The plot is laid in France in the sixteenth century, and deals with the condition of the country at the time of the Siege of La Rochelle. The hero is an English lad, who is in the retinue of a French nobleman, and while so serving succeeds, with the assistance of a faithful friend, in baffling a treacherous plot, in rescuing his master, and in effecting the release of a beleaguered garrison.

Child, Frank S: A colonial witch: being a study of the black art in the colony of Connecticut. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., [1897.] c. 3-307 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Portrays, with the aid of a slight thread of a story, a remarkable phase of life that had its rise and final climax between the years 1640 and 1660 in the American colonies. The author's sketch is keen and sympathetic, and aims to be a charitable interpretation of an inexplicable period of frenzy. The unhappy woman, who is finally hung as a witch, offers in her peculiar characteristics some explanation of this sombre problem, and how it swayed our Puritan ancestors.

Church, S: Harden. John Marmaduke: a romance of the English invasion of Ireland in 1649; il. by Albert Grantley Reinhart. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1897. c. 8+328 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This romance has grown out of the studies the author made for his impartial history of "Oliver Cromwell." John Marmaduke, of a wealthy Yorkshire family, became a captain in Cromwell's Ironsides, and accompanied the Parliamentary army in its invasion of Ireland. His story is full of fighting and adventure; he falls in love with a beautiful Irish girl, who becomes his wife; for this act Cromwell deprives him of his command. The Irish hatred of the invaders is vividly illustrated, and also the desire for revenge on both sides.

Claretie, [Arsène Arnaud,] called Jules. Brichanteau, actor; from the French. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1897. c. 13+366 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"M. Jules Claretie has had a wide acquaintance with actors. He has had an opportunity of studying them still more closely since he has been the manager of the Comédie Française. Brichanteau is the actor enamoured of his art, but who, for one reason or another, has not achieved success. He is a failure without melancholy or envy—an optimist failure. For every circumstance of his life he has words taken from his repertory. He does not say, "I shall require five Louis" He thinks of "Hernani" and speaks of "five Carolus d'Or" Wherever he is, whatever he may be doing, he is always on the boards. Jules Claretie has grasped all the shades of character of his hero, and has rendered them with great delicacy."—From Francisque Sarcey's Introduction.

Clark, F: Thickstun, ["Frederick Thickstun," pseud.] The mistress of the ranch: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 2+357 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The distinctive quality of this novel, aside from the plot, is the local color of life and manners in the far western ranch country, and the descriptions of scenery. The story opens at a railway station in Colorado, where two sisters have just arrived from the east to take possession of their dead brother's ranch, which he has left to his sister Anny. Anny, however, is so quiet and retiring that the other sister, Phœbe Ellen, is always thought to be the heir Out of this mistake arise the incidents of the story, which include two love-stories and an attempted poisoning.

Clark, Imogen. Will Shakespeare's little lad; il. by Reginald Birch. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 4+306 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A story of life at Stratford in Shakespeare's day. The characters are the poet's family, the chief figure being little Hamnet, the youngest born. His relations with his father, for whom he has an intense love, which is ardently returned, are most poetically pictured. Shakespeare's mother is introduced, and she relates to the "little lad" many details of his father's life.

Clark, W: The Anglican Reformation. N. Y., The Christian Literature Co., 1897. c. 7+482 p. D. (Ten epochs of church history, no. 10.) hf. mor., $2.

The writer of the present volume lays claim only to having endeavored to state the facts with greatest possible impartiality. His own point of view is Anglican. He makes the successive changes in the statement of doctrine and in the manner of worship intelligible to the reader. Describes conditions which began in the reign of Henry VIII. and were consummated under Charles II. Special attention is given to the early history of the relations of the Anglican Communion to the Roman see. Full index.

"The index began publication with sixty periodicals on its list, this was subsequently increased to seventy, the number that will be found indexed in the present volume. The list for 1897 has been still further increased to one hundred. The design of the undertaking was twofold. to furnish an index once a month that would appear as soon as possible after the periodicals themselves were published, and to make it cumulative, including in each number all material previously published arranged in one alphabetic series, thus avoiding the inconvenience of consulting a dozen indexes during the year. The dictionary catalog form was adopted, comprising author, subject, and title entry if noteworthy."—Introduction The price of the present volume includes subscription for the year.

Cooke, Frances E. England. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. 22+253 p. il. S. (History for young readers ser) cl., 60 c.

Written with the aim of giving to children, in simple language, a clear conception of the growth of the English nation To this end, while the principal events in the history have been chronicled, less stress has been laid on the lives of kings and the battles they fought than on circumstances affecting more closely the interest of the people, such as the growth of the Parliament and the gradual development of civilization in the land

Cooley, C: H. Genius, fame, and the comparison of races. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1897.] 42 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 197.) pap., 35 c.

The author maintains that every able race of men probably produces a number of greatly endowed men many times larger than the number that attain to fame. The question which, if any, of these geniuses are to achieve fame is determined by historical and social conditions, and these vary so much that the production of great men cannot justifiably be used as a criterion of the ability of the races.

Cooley, Ellen Hodges. The boom of a western city. Bost, Lee & Shepard, 1897. c. 4+89 p. D. (Hearthstone ser.) cl., 50 c.

In the spring of 1878, the town of Fargo, Dakota, was very young and ready for a "boom." Mr. Bullard, of northern Vermont, is seized with the western fever, sells his farm and carries his capital to Fargo for investment in real estate His experience and also that of his wife and daughter are both amusing and instructive, and are said to be sketched from life.

Cooley, Le Roy Clark. Physics: the student's manual for the study-room and laboratory. N. Y., American Book Co., [1897.] c. 448 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The author is professor of physics in Vassar College. His book, he says, differs from many other elementary text books in this respect: it contains much less descriptive material for purely illustrative work, and much more of that which is necessary for systematic and successful quantitative study.

Corbet, Katherine and Sybil. Animal land where there are no people. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1897. c. unp. il. obl. S. bds., $1.

Pictures of impossible and curious animals, drawn by the mother of a little four year-old girl after she had heard the strange creatures described by the little girl in the nonsensical language of the text. According to the young author of the original and humorous conceptions, "Animal land is a garden cage near the North Pole, where there are no people." Introduction by Andrew Lang.

Corbin, J: School-boy life in England: an American view. N. Y., Harper. 1898 [1897.] c. '97. 10+226 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A study of the great institutions of "secondary education" in England—the public schools; as types of the system the author selects Winchester, founded in 1387. Eton in 1440; and Rugby, founded in 1567 and remodelled by Arnold during his headmastership, which commenced in 1837. The writer discusses the schools, with especial reference to the "house" system, self-government by the boys, the character of athletics, and the relations between boys and masters. In the final chapters he advises against the sending of American boys to English schools.

Cornford, L. Cope. The master-beggars; il. by W. Cubitt Cooke. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. c. 4+298 p. map, il. D. cl., $1.50.
The master-beggars were the "Gueux," a league of Flemish noblemen organized in 1566 to resist the introduction of the Inquisition into the Low Countries. The events narrated took place in 1568 The Duke of Alva played an important part in the circumstances which led a young nobleman to forsake his monastery and join the master-beggars. The element of romance centres in the adventures of two ladies who went through much tribulation in those stirring times. The rise of the Huguenots also supplies incidents.

Couch, L. Quiller. A Spanish maid. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1898 [1897.] 3+302 p. D. cl., $1.50.
A Spanish girl flying from a cruel father, tramps to a neighboring port, and ingeniously has herself carried aboard a strange ship which seems to be the legendary "Flying Dutchman." It is manned by a weird crew, which, when they discover her, look upon her with fear and distrust. Her wild nature shows itself in dance and song, and believing she has bewitched the ship they put her in a small boat and cast her ashore on the English coast A young fisherman finds her and takes her to his home. He not only falls in love with her, but every other man who sees her. Her sojourn in the village brings general disaster, ending in a tragedy The writer is the sister of "Q"—A. T: Quiller Couch.

Coulevain, Pierre de. American nobility. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 11+498 p. O. cl., $1.50.
The problem M de Coulevain would solve is the general failure of international marriages from the American standpoint. The reason he tries to set forth through many pages of criticisms and reflections upon the American woman and her peculiar temperament and limitations, and by a thread of a story which relates to the wooing and wedding of Anne Villars, a New York heiress, by the Marquis d'Anguillon, an impoverished French nobleman of long descent. Poor Annie's American temperament is blamed for the Marquis' infidelities, who is a vain, selfish, stupid prig, without any real sense of honor, and utterly unworthy of the noble, generous American girl.

Cox, Jacob Dalson. The battle of Franklin, Tennessee, November 30, 1864: a monograph. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 10+351 p. maps, O cl., $2.
A more elaborate account, supported by new documents, of the battle of Franklin than that given by Maj.-Gen. Cox in "The march to the sea, Franklin, and Nashville." This battle was a hard-fought and bloody combat, and a turning-point in a decisive campaign; the defeat of Hood was recognized as "the beginning of the end" of the Civil War, and the most disheartening blow up to that time the Confederacy had received. Many misunderstandings and erroneous reports exist about the battle, hence the importance of this fully authenticated report. Gives a list of books of frequent reference (1 p.). Index.

Craig, R. Manifold. The sacrifice of fools. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1897.] c. '96. 2+309 p. D. buckram, $1.
The scenes are laid in England and in India; Mrs Rutherglen and her daughter Salome quarrel over Salome's determination to marry a man to whom her mother is opposed; the latter being justly incensed, vows never to leave the house until her daughter complies with her wishes; Salome being also obstinate marries the man; this mutual sacrifice is termed "the sacrifice of fools" Passages of Salome's life in India show the effects of sacrifice as practised in the jungle by the ape worshippers. The purpose of the novel seems to be to show the folly of ill-judged sacrifice.

Craigie, Mrs. Mary, ["John Oliver Hobbes," pseud.] The school for saints. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1897.] c. 2+404 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The time of the chief events in this story is the latter half of 1869, when the Irish Church Bill was uppermost in the minds of the political and social English world. Disraeli and his stand on this question furnish some interesting scenes and some brilliant conversations. The scene shifts between France, England, and Spain. The heroine is an earnest Catholic, a beautiful girl of seventeen, living apart from her husband. Marriage and divorce are also fearlessly discussed.

Crestien of Troyes. King Arthur and the table round: tales chiefly after the old French of Crestien of Troyes; with an account of Arthurian romance and notes by W: Wells Newell. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. 2 v., 41+229 p. D. cl., $4.

Mr. Newell has retold several of the tales connected with the Arthurian legend. after the metrical early French version of Crestien of Troyes. It has hitherto been held that these stories depend on an ancient British or Celtic origin Mr Newell, on the other hand, regards the style as created by French poets, and as indicating the rise of modern literature In this respect the Introduction to this book will be found new and instructive. The work contains chapters on Erec and Enidè, Alexander and Soredamor, The Knight of the Lion, Perceval, The Maid with the Narrow Sleeves, Merlin, Lancelot of the Lake, The quest of the Holy Grail, The Maid of Escalot, and The death of Arthur.

Crockett, S: Rutherford. Lochinvar: a novel; il. by T. de Thulstrup. N. Y., Harper, 1898 [1897.] c. 5+412 p. D cl., $1.50.

The scene opens in Scotland at the close of the seventeenth century, and is speedily transferred to Holland, where most of the action takes place. The hero, Wat Gordon, is an impetuous young Scotchman, a born soldier, with the genius for getting into scrapes and for getting out of them with the assistance of pretty young women who admire him for his frank ingenuousness and his courage

Crockett, S: Rutherford. The surprising adventures of Sir Toady Lion; with those of General Napoleon Smith: an improving history for old boys, young boys, good boys, bad boys, big boys, little boys, cowboys, and tomboys: il. by Gordon Browne. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1897.] c. 14+314 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

The story of three mischievous but lovable children, of whom the youngest was Sir Toady Lion. They are motherless, but watched over by a rough-handed, tender-hearted nurse, who had loved their mother All the ways children can invent to amuse themselves, and about all the trouble they can make, are crowded into the profusely illustrated pages of this new young people's book by the author of "Sweetheart travellers."

Crofton, Mrs. Helen Milman, [Mrs. Caldwell Crofton.] Little Ivan's hero: a story of child life; il. by E. Stuart Hardy. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., [1897.] 5–128 p. O. cl., $1.25.

A pathetic story of a little English boy who has lost his mother and is looking forward to his father's return from India. He has no remembrance of his father, but has built up a romantic ideal of him through his talks with his mother. Their life together is pictured, each endeavoring to carry out the wishes of the lost wife and mother.

Croker, Mrs. Bertha M. Beyond the pale: a novel. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., [1897.] c. '96. 354 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A romantic love story of Ireland, in which there is incidentally a great deal about horses and hunting. The Irish peasant character is well sketched, and also that of the middle and upper classes. The interest centres in Denis Money, whose father, a very wealthy Englishman, has rented Carrig, a splendid manorial and sporting estate that had once belonged to the great Irish family of O'Bierne The only living descendant of this family is a young girl, whose business is to train horses. Denis, of course, falls in love with her, and she returns again to her old home.

Davies, Helen. The reveries of a spinster. N. Y. and Chic., F. Tennyson Neely, 1897. c. 2+216 p. nar. S. cl., 75 c.

The supposed repinings of a New York school teacher, who never having had time or opportunity in her lonely life for love making satisfies her cravings for sympathy by communing with an imaginary lover. Later her sphere broadens, a real lover enters her life, and she becomes a professional musician, who ruthlessly rejects love and espouses art. When surfeited with adulation and the attention of many suitors the heroine comes to the conclusion that her life on this account is a failure.

The scene of Mr. Davis's first long novel is laid in the opening chapter in New York, when Robert Clay, a talented young civil engineer, meets the girl he believes he is in love with at a fashionable dinner. Afterward the scene is transferred to a little South American republic. Here Clay is managing an iron mine for Mr. Langham, the father of Alice Langham, the girl mentioned. Mr. Langham comes to investigate the working of his mine, bringing his two daughters, Alice and Hope, with him. A revolution takes place in the little republic, in which almost all the characters are involved—Hope included. This and Hope's love-story are the leading themes.

Mr. Morley Fenton, precise, correct, politic and diplomatic, respected of all men, is shown making plans to guard in strictest manner a young man of twenty-three, known to the world as "Fenton's foundling." His intimate friend advises him to relax his constant watchfulness and let the boy rub against the world and find his level. The book narrates the workings of both plans of dealing with the youth, who becomes a clever doctor, and after long years of self-development is known to all who suffer and need him as "God's foundling." The quotations from Robert Browning throughout the book almost tell the story.

In the prologue one discouraged friend says to another: "Your God is dead, for none can discern His breath. He is certainly asleep, for none can waken Him." It is Easter evening. Both friends dream and see visions of God's purposes and of life beyond the grave. In the epilogue the discouraged friend dies full of hope and reconciled in all things, knowing "the hairs of your head are numbered."

Dawson, W. J. Thro' lattice windows.. N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1897. c. 8+384 p. S. cl., $1.25.

Nineteen stories of English humble life, all connected more or less with one another, and each picturing some simple joy or sorrow of the rustic folk of Barton Moor and the village of Barford. In their mingling of pathos and humor they are akin to the Scotch stories of lowly life, and in their local color and character drawing they show an intimate familiarity with the subject. The stories follow a prologue entitled "When the sun shines," which gives a poetic picture of the Valley of the Bar, in which are found these "homely faces, seen where house fires glow, thro' lattice windows"

Deland, Ellen Douglas. Alan Ransford: a story; il. by Harry C. Edwards. N. Y., Harper, 1898 [1897.] c. 2+281 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A story for boys and girls, having as its scene Germantown, a suburb of Philadelphia. Two families living next door to each other, in one of which there is an over-abundance of boys, become very intimate, sharing each other's fun and scrapes One of the boys, Alan Ranford, is a manly, generous fellow, of a very reserved nature where girls are concerned—in fact he does not care for them. The point of the story is his gradual change of view, and the discovery by the girls that he is quite charming.

Deland, Ellen Douglas. In the old Herrick House, and other stories. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. '96. 4+282 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Simple stories of life among girls. In the first, Elizabeth Herrick lived alone in Philadelphia with her two aunts, who misunderstood her. In "At the Camerons'," Hilda and Rose Von Dalbersdorf came to their grandmother's house to live Rose was stolen by a French maid-servant, but found again, and with her her cousin Noel, who had been stolen before. In "The little red book" Eleanor Rogers was subjected to much sorrow by the stories set afloat by Bertha Weld, but in the end all was cleared up.

Deland, Ellen Douglas. A successful venture; il. by Alice Barber Stephens. Bost., W. A. Wilde & Co., [1897.] c. 340 p. sq. D. cl., $1.50.

A story for girls by the author of "Malvern" and "Oakleigh" Tells of the experience of the Starr family, left almost penniless by their father's death, in earning a living for themselves. They reject the offer of a rich Boston aunt, to take them all under her roof and care for them, preferring to remain in their old home and be independent At first their experience is disheartening, but they succeed finally in meeting all their obligations.

The first article shows how the concentrated agencies of the school should bring the child to share in the inherited resources of the race. It points out how discipline and method should be influenced to this end. The article by Dr. Small is a trenchant exposition of the principle that education should direct its attention to sociology, and learn what the work of reality demands of the teacher.

Diderot, Denis. Rameau's nephew; a translation from Diderot's autographic text, by Sylvia Margaret Hill. N. Y., Longmans Green & Co., 1897. 21+176 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Diderot is thought to have written this satire in 1770. This is the first English version made of it from the author's autographic copy, which came accidentally to light only in 1890. Critics differ as to the subject or object of Diderot's singular farce-tragedy. It has been declared to be merely a satirical picture of contemporary manners, also a rejoinder to Palissot's comedy Les philosophes, and a discussion of the merits of the French and Italian schools of music. All these things are in the dialogue, but "they are incidents to the central figure of the sketch, the prodigy of parasites," says M. Monval.

Dolbear, Amos Emerson. Modes of motion; or, mechanical conceptions of physical phenomena Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1897. c. 4+119 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Intended for persons who have an interest in phenomena of all kinds; makes clear how one kind of energy is converted into another kind, and the conditions needed for transforming it. A chapter on the luminiferous ether presents the wide difference there is between it and ordinary matter, in its structure, its limits, and its modes of operation, in a way that greatly enlarges one's view of the possibilities in nature. Lastly, electrical and magnetic phenomena are presented as depending upon simple mechanical conditions.

Dole, C: Fletcher. The coming people. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1897.] c. 10+209 p. S. cl., $1.

This little book of inspiring optimism is an attempt to show the actual results that are working out in the stress of modern life. It is proved by facts that the ideal and the practical so far from being antagonistic are properly one. The new philosophy, representing the latest development of Christianity, is applied toward the solution of the great problems of society. The trend of the movement is made to appear whereby the material means, the moral influence, and the political power of the world are surely coming into the hands of the just and friendly.

Dole, Edmund P. The stand-by. N. Y., The Century Co., 1897. c. 5+228 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A story of life in a New England village: the action centres about a vigorous fight on the prohibition question The hero wins the name that is taken for the title of the story during his college days, when he leads his crew to victory in an exciting boat-race. He becomes editor of a reform newspaper in a Maine town, and soon finds himself at the head of the prohibition forces The battle is desperate, for the town is despotically ruled by a rich brewer, who is a man of indomitable character and fertile in resource.

The Beaumanoirs, the Ashtons, the Osbornes, Lyndell Sherburne, and other characters who figured successively in five preceding stories, are also present in this one; the interest, however, is rather in the action of their children. Nora Drayton's courtship and marriage being one of the notable incidents of the story.

Douglas, Amanda Minnie. Hannah Ann: a sequel to "A little girl in old New York." N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. 2+375 p. D. buckram, $1.50.

Hannah Ann Underhill was a little girl who lived in New York in 1846. The events are for the most part real, and many of the people who lived in Hannah Ann's time, and whose histories are linked with hers, were famous in the making of New York. Among these are the Beekmans. The story covers over a half century, ending in 1897.

Douglas, Amanda Minnie. Her place in the world. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [1897.] c. 3+355 p. D. cl, $1.50

The scene is laid in New England. The hero is an ambitious young farmer, in whose life two women play important parts He finally marries one of these, a senseless butterfly; the other, a woman of refinement and purpose inciting him to a course which leads to worldly success, becomes his counsellor and friend. The story traces the effects of the contrasting characters in the making and marring of Royal Palmer, showing also how a young woman found her sphere.

The Athenæum calls this novel "a powerful sketch of Napoleon in the days when from his camp at Boulogne he looked across the Channel and dreamed of destroying us" "The plot is slight," it says, "Louis de Laval, the hero, who tells his own tale, is an émigré whose ardent love for his country overcomes his inherited hatred of the usurper. He returns to France, and takes service under the emperor, but much happens to him before his fortune is established. His uncle Bernac is not only a treacherous villain who has usurped the estates of the family, he is also a government spy, and is mixed up in dark and slippery doings. Laval plunges head first into a nest of intrigue, and only his good star brings him out safe"

Dunning, Edwin Ja. The genesis of Shakespeare's art: a study of his sonnets and poems. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1897. c. 34+336 p. O. buckram, $2.

After an attack of severe inflamation of the eyes the author became blind at the age of thirty-seven. He then began to commit to memory the masterpieces of his favorite authors, and amongst other things memorized the entire 154 Shakesperean sonnets, "A lover's complaint," and "Venus and Adonis." He began to discern a unity of thought and purpose running throughout the whole, and this hitherto hidden meaning he has endeavored to make clear to the general reader. He believes that Shakespeare unfolds a scheme of poetic development, or, of the natural evolution of the poet. The order in which to read is "Venus and Adonis," "The sonnets," and "A lover's complaint."

An effort to prove, by means of a novel, that although materialization after death is impossible, spiritual communication between the living and the dead is possible. An old rector, who was nearing death, promises his daughter that if it is possible for those physically dead to return to earth he will do so; soon after making the promise he dies. His daughter's experiences thereafter are given in proof of the theories advanced.

Eastman, Charlotte Whitney. The evolution of Dodd's sister: a tragedy of everyday life. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1897. c. 3–230 p. D. cl., 75 c.

A study of the woman question. Poor home training and a faulty educational system produce the ethical failure, called Dodd's sister. Her development from infancy to wifehood is critically considered. Teaches that womanhood must be the aim of a woman's education; motherhood strong and capable must be the focal point of her development.

The story deals with the period just after the death of Luther, when Protestants and Catholics were struggling for the mastery in Germany and the Netherlands. It opens in the city of Ratisbon where Charles v meets Barbara Blomberg and is captivated by her voice. Later the story changes to the Netherlands. Charles v.'s relations with Barbara, his religious fanaticism, Barbara's own eventful career, the continual warring of princes and burgher, make up a picturesque narrative.

The general government of the Greek islands during the reign of the tyrants is portrayed in this story. The interest centres upon the island of Andros. The government of the people is overthrown, and Cepheus, a despot, becomes king. He is absolute and cruel, and when a revolt is made against him and fails, he not only strangles the chief actor, but refuses the body the right of burial. There is another revolt led by Cyparissus, a young noble, and it being successful, Cyparissus becomes king and Cepheus is killed. Phaio, a beautiful woman, plays a leading part in the rebellion, and has much to do with the new administration.

The author advances some novel and startling propositions in science. "He starts out with," the Chicago Dial says, "an extended mathematical discussion of some of the fundamental propositions in Newton's "Principia," pointing out what he regards as Newton's mistakes, which have misled all subsequent mathematicians and physicists. Out of his corrections he develops a new theory of gravitation, leading to the conclusion, taking into account also centrifugal motion, that the earth is a comparatively hollow shell of unequal thickness. He further proceeds to the following revolutionary generalizations, which we give in his own words: 'We are thus led to the great generalization that Space is Energy.' 'Gravitation is caused by Energy being more abundantly present in Matter occupied space than in other regions.'"

"The purpose of this small treatise is to give in plain and inoffensive terms a short and simple account of the circumstances attendant upon the birth of human beings into the world. Comprising the subject fully it is so written as to be fittingly placed in the hands of sons or daughters at an age when their growing intelligence seeks to know the origin of their being, or when they ought (if only for the sake of prudence) to be informed of the dangers and possibilities and responsibilities of coming years."—Introductory (to parents).

Most of the action occurs in the art studios of New York City. One of the women who posed was a society girl who frequented the studios because Bohemian life attracted her; the other was a professional model; who earned a living by posing in costume. A well-known artist plays an important part in the lives of both women, although he is not the hero of the sensational novel.

Prof. Falkner analyzes the figures furnished by the United States Census and shows that they are defective. While other nations measure the amount of crime by the number of convictions, we estimate it by the number of persons in prison. He shows that our customary calculations distort the proportions of crime to be attributed to the males in the community, to the colored race, and to foreigners; while it gives a very false view of the relative frequency of different classes of crimes. Homicide, burglary, etc, appear to be much more numerous than they really are.

Eleanora Dean is a New England girl with a fine dramatic voice, which is at first almost ruined through bad training. She goes to England and learns to sing under a great master, and makes a successful début in Paris in grand opera. Her heart history largely influences her career; she first loves unwisely a man quite unworthy of her—a German musician who is married, who almost wins her; it is to free herself from his influence that she goes abroad. In London she is again wooed, this experience ending tragically

In the previous volume, "The making of Pennsylvania," a full account was given of the numerous nationalities and religions which made up the population of the province. This may be described as the narrative or social and political history of the state The Quakers are the heroes of the first seventy years of the colony. Their disappearance during the revolution and the rise of the Presbyterians and Scotch-Irish is noted. Other important events are described down to the year 1800, the narrative ending with the Whiskey Rebellion Two chapters relating to a more recent period deal with the services of the state in the civil war and the pre-eminence of Philadelphia.

Fletcher, Horace. Happiness as found in forethought minus fearthought. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1897. c. 3–251 p. D. (Menticulture ser, no. 2) cl., $1.

The author of "Menticulture" (See notice P W, October 6, '95) insists that the underlying cause of all weakness and unhappiness in man has always been and is still weak habit of thought A strong optimistic habit of thought is to do away with fear—fear of death, of disaster, of non-attainment, and all things that never happen as feared, and upon which so much mental strength is wasted. There should be forethought and high ideals, but fearthought, the unprofitable, weakening, selfish element of looking into the future should be eliminated

Ford, Mary Hanford. The holy grail the silent teacher. Chic., Alice B. Stockham & Co., 1897. c. 4–157 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.

The author has devoted herself to the interpretation of the classics. She discloses the symbolism of Goethe's Faust, of the legend of the Holy Grail, giving a history of its literature from the wandering minstrels to Tennyson and Wagner of our time; and of Balzac's Seraphita, showing how this book contains a wonderful philosophy of health and happiness.

Ford, Paul Leicester. The great K. and A. robbery. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. '96, '97. 8+200 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The story is told by the superintendent of the Kansas and Arizona Railroad. While in charge of a "special" carrying Mr. Cullen, the vice-president of the road, and his family to Ash Forks, Arizona, to the annual election of the road, his train is "held up," and robbed, but only of some mail matter. The mysterious circumstances surrounding the robbery invite a rigid investigation, and a very clever plot is exposed, in which the passengers he is carrying are implicated. Maud Cullen is an attractive figure in this railroad story, and is fairly won by the superintendent

Ford, Paul Leicester, ed. The New England primer: a history of its origin and development, with a reprint of the unique copy of the earliest known edition and many facsimile illustrations and reproductions. Foss, S: Walter. Dreams in homespun. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1898 [1897.] c. '97. 7+221 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author's talent consists largely in treating common every-day themes poetically. He invests with a halo of homespun beauty the scenes and incidents in the lives of average men. He is quaint and also humorous, using often the New England dialect. The verses in this volume have appeared in the New York Sun, Herald, Tribune and World, Puck, Judge, and other leading papers.

Foster, D: Skaats. Spanish castles by the Rhine: a triptychal yarn. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1897. c. 4+245 p. il. nar. S. (Buckram ser.) buckram, 75 c.

Three extravagant stories of an imaginary German kingdom, somewhat in the vein of "The prisoner of Zenda" Several of the same characters appear in all of them; they are entitled: "The crisis in Oldendorf," "The six dumb bells of Castle Schreckenstrohm," and "The man who looked like the king."

Foster, Mrs. Isabella H., ["Faye Huntington," pseud.] His first charge. Bost., Lothrop Pub. Co., [1897.] c. 3-308 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A young minister finds his first charge to be a parish in a rich hop-growing country. The hops are harvested and sold for the making of malt liquors, beer being the chief result. An earnest apostle of temperance, the young clergyman is faced at once by the question, "What is my duty?" How he solves the question and how he is helped and hindered by those with whom he is in daily contact, furnishes the material and action of the story.

Information and suggestions for those who advertise or want to advertise, with styles of type and methods of attractive "make-up" Mr. Fowler has been for twenty-five years a writer of advertisements, and has gathered all his experience and knowledge into this volume. It consists of over two hundred articles on kindred subjects, such as mail advertising, postal-cards, copyrights, trade-marks, window-dressing, co-operative papers, trade papers, free samples, etc. Under "Great successes" are gathered two hundred and forty personally written articles by the great business successes of the world, telling how they made advertising pay. There are also one hundred specimens of advertisements of the best one hundred advertisers.

Fox, J:, jr. "Hell fer sartain" and other stories. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 4+119 p. D. cl., $1.

Stories of persons living in the mountains, which lie in West Virginia and Kentucky They are for the most part told in dialect, and are full of allusions to customs peculiar to that section of the country. "On Hell fer Sartain Creek," though included in "A Cumberland Vendetta, and other stories," is reprinted here, because it is one of the series of similar monologues contained in this volume.

Fox, J:, jr. The Kentuckians: a novel; il. by W. T. Smedley. N. Y., Harper, 1898 [1897.] c. '97. 4+228 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A dramatic contrast is made between the two distinctive types of Kentuckians—the "blue-grass" man and the mountaineer. Boone Stallard, the mountaineer, is really the hero of the book, and a sturdy character he is: gentle and noble-hearted for all his crudeness, and a born leader. Rannie Marshall, the "blue-grass" man, stands for a well-known type of Kentucky gentleman, of good birth and family tradition, and finely equipped by education and influence for the public career on which he is fairly launched when the story opens. Both men love Anne Bruce, the governor's daughter This rivalry and its results and the history of a feud are realistically told.

Love stories first published in the Northwestern Miller, Scribner's, Harper's, McClure's Magazine, and other periodicals. The titles are: The strike at Glasscock's; The judgment on Mrs. Swift; The dilemma of Sir Guy the neuter; The court of last resort; Why Abbylonia surrendered; The ladder of grief; The captured dream.

French, Alice, ["Octave Thanet," pseud.] The missionary sheriff: being incidents in the life of a plain man who tried to do his duty; il. by A. B. Frost and Clifford Carleton. N. Y., Harper, 1897 c. 4+248 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Six short stories, depicting the character of Amos Wickliff, a sheriff in a western town, who combines executive ability with a strong will and a very gentle humane nature. In each story he exhibits one or more of his peculiar characteristics. The stories are called: The missionary sheriff, The cabinet organ, His duty; The hypnotists, The next room, The defeat of Amos Wickliff.

Frere, Mary. Old Deccan days; or, Hindoo fairy-tales; with an introd. and notes by Sir Bartle Frere. [New issue.] Albany, N. Y., Jos. McDonough, 1897. 344 p. O. cl., $1.25.

This charming collection of Hindoo fairy-tales, current in Southern India and collected from oral tradition, has long been out of print. The increased interest in the study of comparative folklore during the past few years has led the present publisher to believe that a reprint of a small edition of the book would not be unacceptable to libraries organized since the last edition was exhausted, and also to students and the general reader.

Fresenius, C. Remigius. Manual of qualitative chemical analysis. Authorized tr. by Horace L. Wells. New ed., thoroughly rev. from the 16th German ed. N. Y., J: Wiley & Sons, 1897. c. 16+748 p. il. 1 double-page pl. O. cl., $5.

During the fourteen years that have elapsed since the appearance of the last American edition of this work, two revised German editions (the fifteenth and sixteenth) have been published, embracing so many additions and other improvements that the need of a new translation has been felt. With the consent of the author (given only a few months before his death), and also with the permission of Prof S W Johnson, editor of the preceding American editions, this translation has therefore been undertaken.

Freytag, Gustav v. Die journalisten: lustspiel in vier akten; ed. for school use by J. Norton Johnson. N. Y., American Book Co., [1897.] c. 171 p. D. bds., 35 c.

A novel founded on the early colonial history of Virginia. Incidents which were the outcome of Bacon's Rebellion in 1676 are given prominence in the story, which is quaintly told by John Vivian, supposed to have been an actor in the perilous adventures described. Vivian dwells particularly on the tyranny of Governor Berkeley, tracing the course of Bacon and other characters who figured in the famous Rebellion. Introduces likewise Mistress Langdon, who plays a prominent part in the history of the colony and in the life of the hero.

Fytche, M. Amelia. Kerchiefs to hunt souls. a novel. [New issue.] N. Y. and Chic., F: Tennyson Neely, 1897. 290 p. por. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The motto on the author's title-page is "O Love! how many crimes are committed in thy name?" Love, passionate, earthly love is one of the "kerchiefs to hunt souls." The author illustrates her theories in a story that has its scene in Paris. Dorothy Pembroke, a Canadian girl, who has taught school for five years, goes abroad to study. A young Englishman, a widower with a sad history, offers her his hand, professing for her the deepest friendship and sincerest respect—the only sure basis he believes of marriage. But Dorothy wants to be loved, and is loved in Paris by a young artist of noble birth, who almost breaks her heart.

The author was for seven years chef of the Hotel Brunswick, and at present holds the same position in the Hotel Majestic in New York. He says in his preface: "I have undertaken this work for the purpose of making clear to housekeepers and others how easy it is to follow well-directed recipes and in order to simplify what has heretofore been considered a difficult task."

Gallon, T. Tatterley: the story of a dead man. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 8+311 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 210.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A miserly, hard-hearted old man, who has ignored all human ties, and has especially neglected a nephew of whom he is guardian, because he prefers art to business, in a fit of passion makes a new will, leaving his whole fortune to a distant cousin "Tatterley," an old servant who has lived with him all his life, and who resembles him greatly, dies suddenly at this time. The old man, Caleb Fry, determines to change places with "Tatterley," that he may see how his heirs behave. So it is Caleb Fry that is buried, the old man masquerading as "Tatterley." The story that follows is tender and affecting, showing love triumphant over avarice.

Gamble, Eliza Burt. The God-idea of the ancients; or, sex in religion. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1897. c. 6+339 p. O. cl., $2.25.

"The object of this volume is not only to furnish a brief outline of religious growth, but to show the effect which each of the two forces, female and male, has had on the development of our present God idea, which investigation serves to accentuate the conclusions arrived at in the 'Evolution of woman' relative to the inheritance of each of the two lines of sexual demarcation."—Preface. Much of the material for the work was selected while the author was preparing the "Evolution of woman" for the press, or while searching for data bearing on the subject of sex-specialization.

The scene is an English village. "Miss Providence" is the name given to a young lady named Florence Crossly on account of her desire to settle the affairs of her friends and neighbors She has a lover in the person of Sir Louis Hepburne; she discovers that he once had a flirtation with a governess, so she thinks it her duty to give him up and bids him marry the governess He obeys her and later finds out that his supposed wife has a husband and that she is simply an adventuress, who has imposed upon a self-opinionated girl.

Gerard, Dorothea, [Mme. Longard de Longgarde.] A spotless reputation. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 2+328 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 213.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A character-study of a woman of very great beauty, who is apparently heartless. While she keeps her reputation spotless, she counts her victims by the score. She marries Walter Nolebrooke, a wealthy young Englishman in the diplomatic service, when scarcely more than a girl, because her father tells her it is wise to do so. Nolebrooke knows she does not love him, but hopes to awaken her heart. The painful disillusion that he goes through while his wife's real character is gradually unfolded is the story.

Gibson, W: Hamilton. Eye spy: afield with nature among flowers and animate things; il. by the author. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 16+264 p. por. il. O. buckram, $2 50.

The title of this book gives an idea of its character, as it is, in a certain sense, a game of hide and seek with nature in country roads and bosky dells. Originally intended to interest the young in presenting facts that would appeal to them, it brings us into such close touch with nature that its readers will know no limit of age. It is a well-known fact that many of us look without seeing Mr. Gibson teaches us the value of using our eyesight, and the several subjects treated in this volume can be studied in any part of the country; and, in fact, in some of the back-yards of city residences.

Gibson, W: Hamilton. My studio neighbors; il. by the author. N. Y., Harper, 1898 [1897.] c. '97. 10+245 p. O. cl., $2.50.

Gifford, Edwin Hamilton (Canon.) The Incarnation: a study of Philippians II., 5–11. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. 10+161 p. D. cl., $1.75.
The writer (formerly Archdeacon of London and Canon of St. Paul's) has simply aimed "to establish the true interpretation of St Paul's language, without attempting to discuss the various dogmatic theories which profess to be deduced from it, except in so far as they are based upon representations of the Apostle's meaning," which he regards as mistaken and misleading. A large part of the volume embraces notes on the history of various interpretations.

Gilbert, Mrs. Florence Cecil. The new dispensation and missing link between Jew and Gentile. N. Y., [published by the author, Mrs. Florence Cecil Gilbert, 38 W. 64th St., 1897.] c. '93. 8+329 p. por. D. cl., $2.

An American story with the scene laid on the Hudson, not far from New York City The heroine, Vera Courteney, is a noble and beautiful woman, whose wonderful strength of character and stern devotion to duty are the results of a great temptation and sorrow, which is vaguely hinted at in the course of the story.

Gilhooley (Lord), [pseud. for F: H: Seymour.] The God Yutzo of 763 B.C. 2d ed. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1897.] c. unp il. O. cl., $1.
A little ivory heathen idol bought by the author in Paris suddenly becomes animated when brought to the author's rooms, and delivers himself of many wise and witty epigrams on life, etc., which are offered in this odd-looking volume, which is bound in dull brown sackcloth, with rough edges, and is printed in brown on tobacco paper, so that it has a very ancient appearance.

Gilkes, A. H. Kallistratus: an autobiography; il. by Maurice Greiffenhagen. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1897. 6+241 p. D. cl., $1.50.
The author is Master of Dulwich College, England. In the form of an autobiography, written by a young Athenian, Kallistratus, he tells learnedly the story of the second Punic war The portrait he draws of Hannibal is strongly idealized. The descriptions of manners, customs, and modes of thought among the Romans and Greeks, and of the details of savage warfare, are historically correct The story of Hannibal betrayed by his friends and deserted in death is full of pathos.

The policy adopted by Mr Cleveland toward the Sandwich Islands at the time of the dethronement of the Queen in 1893 was severely criticized. The author does not enter into the question of whether the Queen was responsible for her dethronement, neither does he make any special effort to defend or explain Mr Cleveland's action He thinks there has been a persistent misstatement of facts, and he wishes to offer the authentic facts of the situation as gathered from letters and statements of those taking active part in the overthrow of the throne, leaving it then to his readers to draw their own conclusions as to the conduct of the man who was President of the United States.

Michael Akershem, living in a farmer's family, is made miserably unhappy by being constantly upbraided with his illegitimate birth. He is fond of books and obtains an education and comes to New York and secures work on a socialist paper, The Iconoclast. The story passes over a few years, when Michael is shown as a rabid socialist. He does not believe in marriage or any other social laws, and successively breaks several of the commandments, but his life proves not only his inability to keep to his socialistic theories, but the inability of any one to live contrary to the social laws of his time

Grand, Sarah, [pseud. for Mrs. Haldane MacFall.] The Beth book. N. Y, Appleton, 1897. c. 5+573 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"Beth" is a diminutive of Elizabeth given to the heroine in baptism. The book is the story of her life, and is said to be the real experience of the author of "The heavenly twins" Elizabeth Caldwell is born in Ireland; she is one of a large family, her father being a captain of the Coast Guard, who drinks too much whiskey From her birth Beth is misunderstood and unhappy. The domestic infelicities of her home and her parents' weaknesses are laid bare with a ruthless hand Beth in time grows up and marries a doctor, who is immoral and who practices vivisection, which is severely condemned. Beth leaves her husband, writes a book and becomes famous. The story is largely one of detail, picturing the sufferings of woman in her marital reations.

Grant, Ulysses Simpson. Conversations and unpublished letters, by M J. Cramer, D.D. N. Y., Eaton & Mains, [1897.] c. 4-207 p. por. S. cl., 90 c.

These letters and conversations relate to Grant's life before the Civil War, while General and President, and during his trip abroad after leaving the White House, and again while writing his memoirs The majority of the letters were written by himself, the balance by relatives or intimate friends Mr. Cramer, ex-minister to Denmark and to Switzerland, through his connection by marriage with the Grant family had many opportunities of conversing with the General, always making notes of these conversations. The material throws new light on Grant's character, and disproves some calumnies.

Green, Evelyn Everett. Tom Tufton's travels. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1897. 6-330 p. D. cl., $1.25.

When Tom Tufton's father died—he was the squire of Gablehurst—it was found that he had left a bag of gold for Tom to use in seeing the world during a couple of years before he settled down. The time is in the reign of Queen Anne, when the great Marlborough was winning glory for England. Tom starts for London, meets highwaymen in the forest, has an audience with Marlborough in London, and enters his service, goes to France,, returns again to England, and turns highwayman himself for a time.

Greene, Mrs. Sarah Pratt McLean. Stuart and bamboo: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 3+276 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author of "Cape Cod folks" has once more created a set of original characters, which she has placed in Yarmouth, the seaport town of the extreme west of Nova Scotia. A refined widow named Stuart, reduced to poverty, finds lodgings with a "rough diamond" Irish woman also named Stuart, who classifies under the name of bamboo everything that is outside of Celtic descent and the Roman Catholic Church. Among the delightful characters are an old Irish "granny," a boy named Plantagenet in honor of his descent from the Catholic Stuarts, an altruistic Jew who becomes a Christian, a profane sea captain, a Newfoundland dog, etc.

Illustrates the present-day theory that intemperance is more a disease than a vice; the author's hero is a man who drinks to excess, he marries a woman much older than himself, and in a fit of passion and intemperance one day strangles her. Intermingled with his story is the story of an English woman of noble birth, who marries a man socially beneath her, comes to America and opens a boarding-house in New York.

The discovery of America is the subject of the first issue in a series of three volumes, which will deal with notable events of American history. The author says in his preface: "I have not treated the achievement of Columbus as though it were a strange and unconnected episode, but rather as a link in the chain of events." Due consideration is therefore given to Cabot, Vespucci, and other explorers, and the author aims to render justice to the European nations, especial credit being given to Portugal, Holland, and Japan.

Grimshaw, Beatrice Ethel. Broken away. N. Y., J: Lane, 1897. c. 3+295 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is Dublin, Ireland, and the chief character a leading Irish novelist. Stuart Rivington's most honest critic is his wife, and when she tells him that his latest novel is not up to the mark he believes her. To gain new inspiration and change of scene he breaks away from the conventional life of Dublin, and with his wife and cousin takes possession of a tiny cottage on the Wicklow Mountains. His life is attempted by a rival novelist who has become insane, and his beautiful cousin reopens an old love-affair. Under these exciting influences he again writes a successful novel.

Grosse, Ernst. The beginnings of art. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 14+327 p. il. pl. D. (Anthropological ser.) cl., $1.75.

An inquiry into the laws which control the life and development of art, and into the relations existing between it and certain forms of civilization. The author has sought the origin of an artistic activity among the most primitive peoples, like the native Australians, the Mincopies of the Andaman Islands, the Botocudos of South America, and the Eskimos. Their arts are regarded as a social phenomenon and a social function, and are classified as arts of rest and arts of motion. The arts of rest comprise decoration, first of the body by scarification, painting, tattooing, and dress; and then of implements, painting and sculpture; while the arts of motion are the dance, poetry, or song, with rhythm and music.

Growoll, Adolf. American book clubs, their beginnings and history, and a bibliography of their publications. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. 14+423 p. D. hf. leath., ed. printed on Brown's handmade paper, limited to 300 copies, $7.50; ed. on Japan pap., limited to 30 copies, $15.

In his introduction the author traces the publishing activity of the early American literary societies from the Junto down to the Delphians (1726–1825). This is followed by descriptions of thirty-eight clubs, beginning with the first known, The Seventy-Six Society (1854), and ending with the latest one, The Dibdin Club (1897). Appended to the description of each club is a bibliography of the publications of the club with accurately transcribed titles. All the information given has been revised and verified by surviving members of extinct clubs or by the officers and chief members of existing clubs. Specially valuable are the facts relating to the character of the publications, which facts cover much of the political and social as well as the literary history of America. The complete bibliographies make the work valuable for collectors and for libraries. Full index.

Guerber, H. A. The story of the chosen people. N. Y., American Book Co., [1897.] c. '96. 240 p. il. D. (Eclectic school readings.) cl., 60 c.

Gives a consecutive story of the Jews, or "chosen people," as objectively as the stories of the Greeks and of the Romans, with which it forms a series. The narrative has been written in the simplest style, so as to enable children of the third or fourth reader grade to understand it. Not the least attempt has been made to dwell upon the strictly religious side of the subject. The sole aim being to familiarize children, be they of Jewish, Protestant, Roman Catholic, or Freethinker parentage, with the outline of the story contained in the Old Testament.

Guild, Curtis. A chat about celebrities; or, the story of a book. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1897. c. '96. 3+309 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Curtis Guild writes from the experiences and observations of a journalistic career of nearly fifty years. He gives a series of reminiscences of many literary celebrities, such as Longfellow, Holmes, Prescott, and Bancroft, of military ones, such as Grant, Sheridan, and Sherman, and among statesmen, Webster, Sumner, and others. In the sketches of the dramatic stage the volume is especially attractive in its stories of Forrest, Davenport, Booth, Charlotte Cushman, the Wallacks, and others whom the author knew personally during an experience as dramatic critic thirty years and more ago.

Papers that were contributed to Punch, supposedly by a B.A. of an Indian University who had come to London to study law. They relate to his every-day life as he goes about London, and are written in an extremely funny vein. Mr. Jabberjee congratulates himself upon his knowledge of the English language and English literature; his articles are a queer jumble of misquoted phrases. He writes of the theatres, pictures, dinners, shooting on the moors, and other subjects.

Guyau, Jean Marie. The non-religion of the future: a sociological study; from the French. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1897. c. 11+543 p. O. cl., $3.

Shows sociality as the basis of religion. Defines the connection between religion, æsthetics, and morals. Explains the inevitable decomposition of all systems of dogmatic religion, the state of non-religion toward which the human mind seems to tend, also the exact difference between non-religion and the religion of the future. The author recognizes the value and utility, for the time being, of religion, but insists upon its ultimate insufficiency. Part I. treats of the genesis of religions in primitive societies; Part II. of the dissolution of religions in existing societies; Part III. is devoted to a review of the principal metaphysical hypothesis which will replace dogma.

The prelude, or introduction, portrays the observance of Christmas Eve according to the custom of many Christian lands, where the ringing of the church bells in token of joy at the Saviour's birth is considered an important part of the ceremonies. This is here dwelt upon with emphasis in contrast to what follows in the poem, which tells the story of ancient Stavoren, one of the most flourishing cities of Europe in the twelfth century, where a beautiful and wealthy woman, high in authority, but frivolous and selfish, wrought much harm.

Norse legends, which the author thought too crude in their original form for young readers, hence a collection of stories from which objectionable matter is eliminated, and the original form and coloring is retained. Many of the tales are illustrations of old proverbs; this is especially true of the story of the five brothers, which is founded on the "Bundle of sticks." There is a moral vein in nearly all of the selections.

The city here described by Mr. Hamerton was built by the Gauls before the Roman invasion; it was a hillside city full of rare treasures of art, possessing more than two hundred buildings in a perfect state of preservation, in which were found many portable objects, such as coins, pottery, jewelry, etc The excavator of this city had been working in it for eight years. He is called the "Antiquary" in the book, and is often Mr. Hamerton's host. Their delightful evenings together, their walks and drives, in which literature, art, and legends of the past are discussed, are full of information.

Hamerton, Philip Gilbert. The quest of happiness. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1897. c. 34+187 p. D. cl , $2.

This book was begun in 1891, but laid aside for two years, then taken up in 1893, when Hamerton felt he had found "the real law of happiness" He was at work upon it when he died in 1894, leaving the closing chapters unwritten. Happiness as defined by Hamerton means "that degree of satisfaction with our existence which, in spite of minor vexations and disappointments, makes us willing to go on living as we are now living, without any important change" To attain this we must by an effort of will adjust our lives to existing facts, keep our dreams of an ideal world but not expect to find them realized, and above all use all our faculties in proportion to their strength.

Henry Meredyth, the brother of an English earl, is divorced from his wife Evelyn, who has run away with a favored lover. Meredyth now finds himself very poor, as his divorced wife had all the money, and besides he is left with four children, the oldest of whom is Vivian, a girl of about fourteen years This girl takes her mother's part without knowing exactly why. When her father, who has become keeper of a hotel in Ireland owned by his brother the earl, contemplates another marriage, the girl in a fit of indignation introduces the divorced mother who has been discarded by her lover, and succeeds in making much trouble, to no good purpose.

Hamilton, M. McLeod of the Camerons. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 2+355 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 207.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Andrew McLeod, captain of the Cameron Highlanders, noted chiefly for being a good soldier, and for an apparent dislike of women's society, meeting Christina Stoddart, en route to Malta to join her husband, learns her history and is impelled by sympathy to proffer her his friendship; when they have become fast friends, he tells her of sad premonitions for his own future. Christina assures him that she will help him bear his burden, and on her action thereafter is dependant a story of strange issues and dramatic ending.

Handy, W: Matthews. Banking systems of the world: an impartial statement of the conditions of note issue by banks in all nations, and the workings of the systems. [Also] Postal savings banks, detailing the systems in those nations where they exist. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1897. c. 190+2 p. D. cl., $1.

Opens with a history of American banks, commencing in colonial times and coming down to the present. The story of the two United States banks, of their success, and of their final overthrow of that system by Jackson, follows. The state banks and the various systems under which they were established are next described. Then came the national bank plan, evolved out of the best of the state banking systems, and this we have to-day. In succeeding chapters the author gives the history of the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Scotland, and the banks of all the nations of Europe. Bibliography (1 p.).

Harris, G: Inequality and progress. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., [1897.] c. 4+164 p D. cl., $1 25.
"The title of the book is chosen, not as a challenge exactly, but as the most convenient designation to set against certain errors which are mixed up with notions of equality, and to indicate where the emphasis of the discussion lies If the title were expanded to define the purpose of the book precisely, it would run: inequality, a condition of progress . Progress is believed to consist chiefly in a nearer approach to economic, social, and intellectual equality This assumption I make bold to question I contend that inequality always has been and always will be the condition of progress "—Author's Introduction.

Hawthorne, Nathaniel. Hawthorne's first diary; with an account of its discovery and loss, by S: T. Pickard. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 8+115 p. D. cl., $1.

In the preface Mr. Pickard says: "A diary kept by Nathaniel Hawthorne during his residence at Raymond, Maine, came to light in Virginia during the late civil war, and fell into the hands of a colored man named William Symmes, who by a curious chance was a companion of Hawthorne in his fishing and gunning sports on the shores of Lake Sebago. Symmes said he had the book from a Maine soldier whom he found in a hospital. Because of his boyish friendship for Hawthorne, he so prized the diary that he could not be induced to part with it After holding it several years he sent extracts from it to a Maine newspaper." These extracts Mr. Pickard reprints in this little book, preceding them with an account of Hawthorne's home in Raymond, and the story of William Symmes.

Hector, Mrs. Annie French, ["Mrs. Alexander," pseud.] Barbara, lady's maid and peeress. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1898 [1897.] c. 3–344 p. D. cl., $1.25.

After serving a six years' apprenticeship to a French milliner and dressmaker, Barbara West, a young girl living in London, thinks she would prefer taking a place as lady's maid to following her trade She obtains a situation as attendant to a young girl about her own age, in an out-of-the-way country place. The two girls become great friends and confidants, their love affairs being the chief theme of their conversations. A mystery is discovered in Barbara's life, showing that she is nobly born, and not a common servant.

The most important work on the greater Northwest which has appeared since the publication of Mackenzie's "Voyages" in 1801. It is a mine of accurate information Dr Coues's work is based upon the journals of Thompson and Henry, preserved in the archives of the Crown Lands Department of Ontario, at Toronto, and the Library of Parliament at Ottawa. The Henry journals were found so readable that they have been published almost entire. The Thompson manuscripts, amounting to about forty folio volumes, have been carefully digested, especially for the years which correspond with the Henry period. The two authors were both partners in the same fur company, travelled over identical routes for thousands of miles, and their respective journals form an admirable concordance. Dr. Coues's notes are most voluminous and encyclopædic in extent and variety. They run along with the narrative, offering a flood of information at every point The maps which illustrate the work consist of three large folding sections traced in fac-simile from David Thompson's original great chart.

The Luddite riots took place in England at the beginning of the present century, and were caused by the introduction of machinery in the manufacturing districts. The secret body which organized them was called King or General Lud. This story gives some idea of the state of things which prevailed in Yorkshire, where, among the croppers and others employed in the woollen manufactures was one of the most formidable branches of the secret association. There is a boy hero

The author of these sonnets, which are known in the original as "Les Trophées," is a Cuban by birth and a Frenchman by education. He was born in 1842, and is a member of the French Academy. The chief events of the ages are sung in these sonnets. They begin with Greece and Sicily, then Rome and the Barbarians, the Middle Age and the Renaissance, the Orient and the Tropics, the Sea of Brittany, and finish with a few desultory poems on nature and dreams. In this English version the form, including the rhyme arrangement, is rigidly followed.

The thought the author desires to emphasize is epitomized in the following sentence: "The man who wins does not devote his life to an exacting passion for a neurotic woman." His hero is a descendant of an old Boston family, his ancestors possessed some virtues, but many vices; his father, believing in heredity, has educated his son on a plan which he hopes will help him avoid the weaknesses of his forefathers. But Jarvis Thornton meets the neurotic daughter of a weak mother and worthless father, and marries her. The great and far reaching force of personal influence or individual character is brought out in a series of essays by the author of "A man's value to society," "Foretokens of immortality," etc. The essays specially assert the debt of wealth to poverty, the debt of wisdom to ignorance, the debt of strength to weakness. The supremacy of heart over brain is the keynote of the author's theories.

Hilton, Alice Howard. Paola Corletti, the fair Italian. N. Y. and Chic., F. Tennyson Neely, [1897.] c. 3–153 p. por. D. cl., 75 c.; pap., 25 c.

Paola Martini was the daughter of a Neapolitan count, who had married a wealthy American girl hoping to restore his fallen fortunes. The young wife dying while her child was an infant, Paola leads a singularly lonely life until her romantic marriage with Marco Corletti, who settles in New Orleans. Pathetic scenes in the life of the young couple are described, and incidents of Creole life are introduced.

Fate ordained that Mrs Milward should perish on the moors while taking her children to a place of safety. The girl fell into good hands, the boy into the hands of gypsies. Fate further ordained that later the boy should be caught near a house the gypsies were robbing. He went to jail. In spite of all this he prospered, worked hard, discovered his sister, was the means of returning a child kidnapped by the gypsies to her father's house, traced the history of his mother's life, and seemed at the beginning of many happy days at the close of the story.

Hodge, J. Aspinwall, D.D. The Ruling Elder at work. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph Co., 1897. c. 7+216 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Instruction in a practical form for Ruling Elders, concerning their office and duties. The author's method is to personate a Ruling Elder under a pastor well qualified to develop his efficiency. The experiences narrated, questions considered, responsibilities encountered, difficulties and encouragements met, are real occurrences, and form part of the life of every Elder The information is drawn partly from personal experience, from the constitution of the Presbyterian church, and the decisions of the General Assembly interpreting it.

"The heroes of these essays need no introduction, and I have no excuse for making them my theme if this book supplies none. I treat the two makers of Macedon, not in proportion to their respective bulk in history, but to the number of books written already about them. Philip, so far as I know, supplies the central figure to no extant biography; Alexander has inspired a whole literature My debts to previous students are obvious enough, even when not indicated in footnotes. I believe I have left very few works bearing on the subject unread, and my unconscious obligations must be many."—Preface.

Holland, Clive. A writer of fiction. Bost., Copeland & Day, 1897. c. 4+130 p. D. cl., $1.

The story finds John March Cardew, "a writer of fiction," on the downward path of popularity. His novels have found less and less demand, and when he and his family are introduced they are living in miserable London lodgings deeply in debt and very hopeless as to the future Their necessities drive his wife to doing fine needlework for a living and he shuts himself into his study to write a novel on "the unsavory topics of life," for a series of "fin de siècle fiction," issued by a prominent London firm He dies suddenly before he knows of the acceptance of his ms., and his wife recalls it and burns it, preferring to keep his name clean than to be enriched through such means.

Hornung, Ernest W: A bride from the bush. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 7+235 p. (Ivory ser., no. 9.) cl., 75 c.

The story opens at a summer residence on the banks of the Thames. It was a Sunday morning in early summer and Justice Bligh, Lady Bligh, and their second son, Granville, were at breakfast. A letter just received from Alfred the oldest son, who has been living in Australia, tells of his marriage and that he is on his way to England with his Australian bride. Her advent into the family and her rough, uncultured ways make the story. She has great beauty though and a warm, tender heart, and all comes right in the end.

Hornung, Ernest W: My lord duke. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 6+299 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story turns on the identity of the heir to an English dukedom. The man brought forward is an Australian found in the bush, rough and uncouth, but with an apparently well-authenticated claim. He has no desire to be a duke, and would willingly at any time return to his old life. His unconventional ways are the cause of many amusing scenes in his introduction to English society. He has a love-story which is also unconventional, and his career takes a most unexpected turn.

Horton, Rob. Forman, D.D. Success and failure. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. 3-96 p. S. (Little books on the conduct of life ser.) cl., 50 c.

"Success lies," says the author, "not in achieving what you aim at, but in aiming at what you ought to achieve, and pressing forward, sure of achievement here, or if not here hereafter." He also proves that many lives the unthinking count failures are true successes. The subject is handled from a deeply religious standpoint.

Hotchkiss, Chauncey C. A colonial free-lance. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 6+312 p. S. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 222.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The time of this tale is 1778, and the scene old New York, mostly of that period during the occupancy of the British, changing to Long Island Sound and to Martha's Vineyard. The central character and the one that tells the story is Captain Donald Thorndyke, master of the Yankee schooner Phantom and a noted smuggler sailing under the British flag, but at heart a patriot. The fortunes of war bring him to New York and in contact with General Sir Henry Clinton, whose despicable character is plainly shown. The narrative is a succession of dramatic and highly sensational episodes, ending with the surrender of Yorktown. By the author of "In defiance of the king."

Jeff Durgin became "the landlord at Lion's Head" after a varied career at Harvard and in Europe. When a small boy his mother began taking summer boarders at the Durgin farm, opposite Lion's Head Mountain She prospers and Jeff is sent to college, all his other brothers but one having died of consumption. Cynthia, his mother's housekeeper, and a pretty, educated New England girl, uses her influence to keep him at Harvard, but he gets in with a wild set, jilts Cynthia, to whom he had become engaged, marries another girl, and becomes a prosperous hotel-keeper.

Howells, W: Dean. An open-eyed conspiracy: an idyl of Saratoga. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 2+181 p. D. cl., $1.

The scene of the story is a fashionable hotel at Saratoga during July and August; it is told by Mr. March, an old creation of the author, who is staying with Mrs March at Saratoga. His sympathies are aroused for a young girl, who seems to be having a stupid time for want of a young man Mrs. March sets about to procure the man, and he turns up in the person of their friend Kendricks The young people become very friendly, and Mrs. March's fear that the affair will become serious and its ultimate results are most interesting

Hunt, Violet. Unkist, unkind: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1898 [1897.] c. '97. 3+283 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The leading characters are Sir Philip Darcie and his wife, who love and admire each other, but continually quarrel, as she is a confirmed flirt and he extremely hot-tempered. The story is told by Lady Darcie's companion, who becomes one of the secretaries of an antiquarian, who is a Northumberland baronet, dwelling in a Peel Tower, one of the strongholds dating back to the days of the Moss-troopers. Here life has fallen back to almost mediæval days.

It is the first secretary who has a passionate but unrequited love for the antiquarian. Lady Darcie and this woman are actors in a tragedy.

Hurst, J: Fletcher. History of the Christian church. In 2 v. V. 1. N. Y., Eaton & Mains, 1897. c. 36+949 p. O. (Library of biblical and theological literature, v. 7.) cl., $5.

This history had its origin in a series of lectures delivered to successive classes of theological students during a period of nearly ten years—1871 to 1880. The material has constantly passed through various stages of revision. The present volume covers the periods of the early and mediæval church, and concludes with the beginning of the Reformation. The second volume will treat the Reformation, and bring the history down to the present time. It will probably be finished in 1898. A classified bibliography of "Literature of church history" covers 14 pages.

Hurst, Julius H. Stephen Lescombe, bachelor of arts. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1897. c. 4+275 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Stephen Lescombe at the age of twenty-three is forced to give up his study for the ministry and take a position as tutor in one of the most beautiful spots on the English coast The family consists of his pupil, a boy of seventeen, a very conventional mother, and an unconventional, very sensible and womanly daughter. Circumstances work at cross purposes, and Stephen loses his place and after many trials his faith in all things. The end is a surprise and a sad one

Hurst, Lulu, [Now Mrs. Paul Atkinson.] Lulu Hurst (the Georgia wonder), writes her autobiography, and for the first time explains and demonstrates the great secret of her marvellous power: who reads the book can acquire the power. Rome, Ga., Lulu Hurst Book Co., 1897. c. 13–267 p. por. D. (Lulu Hurst ser., no. 1.) pap, $1. cl., $1 25.

Some dozen or more years ago the writer of this book, Lulu Hurst was known throughout the United States as the "Georgia Wonder," and as the strongest woman in the world, in her exhibitions in leading cities she demonstrated that she was possessed of an apparently miraculous power, which the strongest men and women working together could not control She now tells the secret of these exhibitions, and relates the entertaining story of her short public career.

With this volume Imbert de Saint-Amand begins an elaborate study of the history of France during the reign of Napoleon III. The development of this interesting character is shown from the days of his early childhood, through his varied experiences in Italy, Switzerland, England, and America, his fiascos of Strasburg and Boulogne, his long imprisonment at and escape from the fortress of Ham, his election to the Chamber of Deputies, to the presidency of the Republic, and finally the coup-d'état and the proclamation anew of the empire. The picture, too, of the true Empress Eugénie in her early years, and the story of her romantic elevation to the throne of France, is painted in lively colors

A story of English characters and scenes that appeared originally as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly. Poynton is an English country-house upon which Mrs. Gereth had spent much time and money in the way of decorations, tapestries, pictures, statuary, etc The story turns upon her son's marriage and her unhappiness in giving up the art treasures of Poynton.

James, H: What Maisie knew. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1897. c. 3+470 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Mr. and Mrs Beale Farange, when the story opens, have just been divorced. Maisie, their child, is to spend six months alternately with either parent, both about equally given to jealousy, rancor, wantonness, and vacillation. The father marries Maisie's governess, the mother marries Sir Claude, who really becomes attached to the child Between these four people Maisie is bandied about, her parents using her to spite each other, her step-parents to make love to each other. The point of the story is its artistic and ingenious method of telling. All is told as it presents itself to Maisie, who naturally has no idea of the sin and wickedness that passes before her eyes.

Johnson, Emory R. Current transportation topics. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1897.] 107–116 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 192.) pap., 15 c.

The topics considered are as follows: Has the Interstate Commerce Commission power to fix rates? Discriminations in railway freight charges; The reorganization of traffic associations; The intervention of the courts to prevent rate wars; Railway receiverships; The diversion of export trade to southern ports.

Johnson, Emory R. Current transportation topics, no. 2: recent supreme ct. decisions. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1897.] 93–103 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 210.) pap., 15 c.

The general subjects discussed are the power of the states to tax the transportation companies, the extent to which competing railways can co-operate by forming traffic associations and the like, and the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate railway rates.

Johnson, Mrs. Helen Kendrick. Woman and the republic: a survey of the woman-suffrage movement in the United States, and a discussion of the claims and arguments of its foremost advocates. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 327 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Largely a reply to Dr. Putnam-Jabobi's "Common sense applied to woman's suffrage" and "The history of woman's suffrage," by Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others. Mrs. Johnson gives the opposite side of the question, with many new and old arguments, supported by carefully-gathered facts and figures. Her conclusions are that woman's suffrage is not the offspring of democracy, but has received its warmest support under monarchical or even despotic governments; that the advance women have made in the professions and the changes for the better brought about in their condition under the laws are to be credited to the broadening of thought, not to the suffrage agitation; that woman, through her sex, is unfitted for political life; that the suffrage would tend to disintegrate the home; that women would lack the physical power to defend a vote, or to carry out the laws she might enact.

Johnson, H:, ["Muirhead Robertson," pseud.] The exploits of Myles Standish. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 11+278 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Comparatively little is known with certainty respecting the first thirty-six years of the life of Myles Standish. In dealing with this period the author of this story has used the license of probability and inference to supply the deficiency of accredited facts The latter portion of the story—from the departure of Standish to America to his death—is in substantial agreement with the original records of the new Plymouth colony. A conspiracy against Alexander I. of Russia is the central motive. Pushkin, the Russian poet, is loved by Zeneida Ilmarine, the prima donna, but as she is the head of the conspiracy and as she loves him she drives him away in order to save his life. By order of the Tsar he plights his troth to Sophie Narishkin, the Tsar's illegitimate daughter, but when she dies he marries the Princess Bethsaba, a Circassian hostage. Around this love-story are grouped the conspirators, the acts of the Tsar, the tyranny of Araktseieff, and the life of St. Petersburg.

Kaler, Ja. Otis, ["James Otis," pseud.] The signal boys of '75: a tale of Boston during the siege. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1897. c. 7-99 p. il. sq. O. (Stories of American hist. ser., v. 6.) cl., 75 c.

Certain boys of Boston town had immediately after the siege began devised a rude system of signalling to such of the comrades as were with the American army near about. Valuable information was thus sent out to the besiegers. Three of these "signal boys," with their dangers and adventures, are the chief characters of the story.

"The object of the author is to bring before the rising generation, in as simple a form as possible, the fact which scientific writers are proving by each new discovery they make, that there is not a single thing in creation, great or small, which does not, when rightly understood, show, per se, that it was made by One who had all power, all knowledge, and all skill; and that this Maker is now, as in the moment of creation, unchanged in His designs and purposes. "His method is one of extraordinary bibliographical minuteness. After citing the modern works on the history of the subject, he gives a list of 178 incunabula, beginning with Ulrich Boner's 'Edelstein' (Bamberg, 1461), and ending with Caxton's 'Esope.' Then follows a list of the known extant copies of each, with a note stating when they have not been seen by the author; next lists of authors, of places where printed, of printers, of the number of leaves in the folio and quarto editions, of the languages, of the places where now preserved, of catalogues, of sale prices, and of former owners. The work is illustrated with three fac-similes, two of which are of title-pages of later date." —Athenæum

Keightley, S. R. The last recruit of Clare's: being passages from the memoirs of Anthony Dillon Chevalier of St. Louis, and late colonel of Clare's regiment in the service of France. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 3+299 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

This is a collection of five short stories, complete in themselves, but included under one title—that of the first story—in this volume. They purport to be the memoirs of a Colonel Anthony Dillon, and are written in the first person, in the style of a soldier of fortune looking back on his past experiences. The first story, "The last recruit of Clare's," tells of the siege of Rayonville, wherein the Irish regiment in the employ of Louis XIV., of which Dillon is then lieutenant, distinguishes itself. The others are: "The king's favor," "The last sacrament," "The case of M. de Lussac," and "The knees of fate."

Keigwin, H: W. The elements of geometry. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1897. c. 6+227 p. D. cl., $1.

The author is teacher in the Norwich (Conn.) Free Academy. He attempts to follow a middle course between the treatise which fully proves the propositions of elementary geometry and the syllabus which contains no proof whatever. The early propositions are proved at length in order to make clear the form of geometrical demonstration, and the details of proof are gradually removed in order to throw the pupil on his own resources. Notes at the end explain the making of models of the figures, on which success depends in solid geometry.

The author's "Dedicatory" gives the key to his book, which claims to teach a new religion; he says "The Jesus which the so-called Christian Church professes to worship is not the Jesus of the New Testament, but a mythical personage of the church's own creation. According to the New Testament, Jesus taught much the church ignores as inconsequential and even impracticable, while inculcating many things which, evidently, he never taught or approved He never claimed for himself what the church claims for him. To those who believe in the one and only God and the genuine Jesus, this book is cordially dedicated."

By the author of "Margaret Kent." The scene is America, then Italy, America again, and afterwards France. A charming American woman who is for the second time a widow returns with her daughter to her native place. Her second husband had been an Italian, and is the father of her daughter, who is more Italian than American, though she believes herself a thorough American. Two men who love the mother and daughter are with them the chief characters. The story is one almost entirely of love and character, the many innocent cross-purposes of the lovers creating amusing and unusual complications.

N. Y., The Self-Proving Account Book Co., 1897. c. 328 p. O. cl., $5.
This work describes and illustrates a system of accounts adapted to various lines of business, which has for its foundation a perpetual balance sheet. It introduces no new elements, but makes various new applications of old principles. A rigid classification of accounts upon balance sheet principles is enforced, and the columnar method of condensation and summarizing is intelligently applied. A given business is represented by the smallest possible number of accounts, and each class of accounts is furnished with books adapted to its special requirements. The authors are both practical business men: the system explained being in successful use in Mr. Brown's store.

The purpose of this compilation is solely that of preserving, in attractive and permanent form, about one hundred and fifty of the best lyrics of America. In no case has a poem been included because it is widely known It is the first systematic attempt yet made to collect, in a single volume, the choicest of American lyrics. The method of arrangement is roughly chronological. Mr. Knowles has not only made a special study of American poetry for years but has had the advantage in editing this volume of the sympathetic advice of some of our best-known critics.

"Facial diagnosis is the ability to determine the physical status of a person from external appearances By its use it is possible to discover accurately the amount and location of matter in the body foreign to its normal condition, and by recognizing incipient tendencies to special phases of disorder, not only to warn the patient of the danger impending, but to summarily counteract the same by natural and unfailing means. This method of diagnosis is really an auxiliary of the great natural science of healing by water."—Introduction.

The story is a satirical account of the trials of a wife who was burdened with a husband who was a "society" fiend. He joined so many societies that he never spent a night at home; in fact he became a husband in name only. In bringing him to his senses his wife becomes herself a victim to the mania for joining societies. The sequel shows how the husband and wife were brought to a realization of their duties as members of society. The author is librarian of the Hamilton Public Library, Ontario, Canada.

Lanciani, Rodolfo Amédee. The ruins and excavations of ancient Rome: a companion book for students and travellers. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 24+619 p. maps, il. O. cl., $4.

Not designed to be a scientific book of archæology, but a companion book for travellers who visit the existing remains and the latest excavations of ancient Rome, and a guide for students. Book 1 describes the fundamental lines of Roman topography, its site, geology, soil, malaria, climate, rivers and springs, aqueducts and drains, walls and roads. Book 2 is devoted to the Palatine Hill. Book 3 describes the Sacra Via, the Forum, and the Capitoline Hill, which are lined and covered by the grandest monuments of the Empire, and every inch of ground they cross or cover is connected with historical events. Book 4 describes the ruins of the Cælian Hill, the Oppian, the Viminal, the Cespian, the Subura, the Esquiline, the Quirinal and the Pincian, the Campus Martius, the Circus Maximus, the Aventine, etc.

Lanza, Clara, Marquise. [formerly Clara Hammond.] Horace Everett: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., 1897. c. 275 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Horace Everett, an American, educated abroad by a somewhat erratic mother, who has neglected him systematically since his boyhood, determines to come to America to make the acquaintance of his father's people, the Everetts—rich New Yorkers. The young man's mother, previous to his departure, contracts a marriage with a Frenchman much beneath her in position, and this leads to a final quarrel between parent and son. Horace is just beginning to make a career for himself in New York, when his mother appears upon the scene, deserted and robbed by her husband. He is obliged to give her a home and resign a girl he is engaged to marry. He has a chum, a young Russian, who is well portrayed.

La Rame, Louise de, ["Ouida," pseud.] The Massarenes. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., [1897.] 583 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"The Massarenes," late of Kerosene City, North Dakota, U. S A., where William Massarene had made millions in many unscrupulous ways, had returned to England, their native land, to spend their money; they aim to entertain the nobility and take a magnificent house in London. Lady Kenilworth, afterward Duchess of Otterbourne, is their sponsor, her aid being given for certain money considerations She is a beautiful, wholly immoral woman, who becomes William Massarene's mistress, while loathing him, in return for his help in extricating her from a serious money trouble. Her whole career, which is most unblushing, is a scathing satire on English life among titled people.

La Rame, Louise de, ["Ouida," pseud.] Muriella; or, Le Selve. Bost., L. C. Page & Co., 1897. 5–240 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Le Selve is a forlorn, out-of-the-way Italian district, whose inhabitants are of the lowest order of half-starved humanity. Among them comes a Russian steward, fired by Tolstoi's ideals and full of the sense of responsibility for his brother man. The hopelessness of his labor, the distrust of his motives, the plans to overthrow his rule are told with all Ouida's pessimism and limitless vocabulary. Muriella is a blood relation of the worst offenders. She protects the man who loves another.

Larned, Josephus Nelson. A talk about books, addressed originally to the students of the Central High School, Buffalo. Buffalo, N. Y., The Peter Paul Book Co., [1897.] c. 3+36 p. D. hf. cl., 50 c.

In opening Mr. Larned dwells upon books generally, their function and value; next he speaks of the relative value of books, indicates some principles in choosing them, and marks out some lines for reading. These lines include poetry, general literature, history, biography, and romance. Leading and valuable works are mentioned

Larned, Walter Cranston. Arnaud's masterpiece: a romance of the Pyrenees. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 5+213 p. S. cl., $1.25.

In this mediæval romance of southern France Mr. Larned has pictured the struggle of a young painter to escape from the influence of purely sensuous beauty and to learn the secret of the spiritual side of his art. These opposing influences are typified by two maidens, each of whom inspires in the hero a different passion for beauty.

Lathrop, Mrs. Rose Hawthorne. Memories of Hawthorne. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 12+482 p. por. D. cl., $2.

Mrs Lathrop's charming memories of her father are illustrated by a number of letters chiefly written by her mother; there are others from other members of the family, intimate friends, etc. Her book covers the family life in Salem, Lenox, and Concord; the term of Hawthorne's residence in Liverpool as United States Consul from 1853 to 1858, his years of travel in France and Italy, 1858–1860; and his last years in Concord, 1860–1864.

Latimer, Mrs. Mary Eliz. Wormeley. Spain in the nineteenth century. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1897. 3–441 p. por. O. cl., $2.50.

The present volume will be the last of Mrs. Latimer's nineteenth century series of historical narratives. This, like the other volumes, comprises contemporaneous history, not easy to find in a continuous narrative elsewhere. The volume, as the title indicates, is devoted to Spain, the last chapter giving a comprehensive account of Cuba. Other chapters on Alfonso XII., his widow and his son; Amedeo, Queen Isabella, the Carlist war, etc. Index.

"I shall endeavor," the writer says in these two lectures, "to investigate the reasons for which we accept the Old Testament as the record of a revelation possessed by Divine authority, and inquire how far they are affected by recent theories and speculations concerning it." While recognizing the great contributions of modern criticism he maintains that it is often not an infallible guide

Le Baron, Grace, [Mrs. Grace Le Baron Upham.] Queer Janet: a book for boys and girls. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1897. 12+187 p. il. sq. S. buckram, 75 c.

Janet was a little girl who had been reared in luxury and had been allowed to have her own way pretty generally. Left to follow her own impulses, she often did unconventional things which obtained for her the title of "queer Janet." She was not lacking in kindness and generosity, her story showing how even a little girl may help others.

Leeds, Virginia Miles. The daughter of a hundred millions. N. Y. and Chic., F. Tennyson Neely, 1897. c. 410 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The beautiful and proud heiress to millions is betrothed to an English lord. She has reasens for believing his estates to be in a bad way, and that he has come to America for the sole purpose of buying a wealthy bride with his title. On his part he has been so long angled after by designing British maids and matrons that he quite despairs of having any one love the man who bears this illustrious name. When the fact is disclosed that each of them is, in reality, madly in love with the other, it is easy for the reader to realize the strong possibilities for dramatic scenes.

Lefroy, E: Cracroft. Edward Cracroft Lefroy: his life and poems, including a reprint of "Echoes from Theocritus"; by Wilfrid Austin Gill; with a critical estimate of the sonnets, by the late J: Addington Symonds. N. Y., J: Lane, 1897. 14+199 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

Edward Cracroft Lefroy was born in London, March 29, 1855 and died Sept. 19, 1891. He was educated for the church, and did earnest work in two different parishes in London; ill-health forced him to resign his office. His brief life was noteworthy for its literary prolificness; he wrote poetry, published volumes of sermons and semi-scientific papers. His poems published in 1884 and 1885 attracted little general attention. After his death Mr. Symonds accidentally had his attention called to his work, and saw in him a genuine poet. All of Lefroy's poems are here reprinted, with Gill's sympathetic memoir, and Symonds's "Critical estimate."

Le Gallienne, R: If I were God. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1897.] 5–37 p. D. bds., 50 c.

In the story or sketch a man and a woman are represented as discussing, during an excursion to the mountains, the great question of the meaning of human life. She is a Christian and believes not blindly but because she has an inner sense of the reasonableness of her belief: she knows by experience that she is right. The mysterious presence of evil, suffering, and death in the world is hard for her to accept, but she is enabled to reconcile it with the love for God and His love for the world The man is spiritually color blind, or, at least, can see no harmony between the fact of the world and the possibility of a good God Their arguments, like all discussions where the disputants are on different planes of thought, are futile to convince; but each speaks honestly, earnestly, reverently, and sympathetically.

The Soudan, the warlike forces of the Khalifa—the successor to El Mahdi—and the neighboring Arab tribes, are the scene and actors chosen for this story of oriental adventure and mystery. The tale is told by the Dervish Zafar ben A'Ziz, who, left for dead in a combat with hostile Arabs, is rescued by a sultan's daughter and initiated into the mysteries of "the sign of the asp." His journey to the wonderful hidden city, guarded by "the eye of Istar," his perils and escapes, make up a vivid romance.

Levasseur, E. The concentration of industry, and machinery in the United States. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, 1897. 25 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 193.) pap., 25 c.

Prof E. Levasseur of Paris, records his observations of the remarkable fashion in which mechanical processes have permeated into the every-day life of our people Such a large use of machinery involves an intensity of labor unknown upon the European continent, as his evidence amply demonstrates It brings with it a concentration of industry peculiar to the United States. While it brings attendant evils, the wheels of progress do not move backwards, and the advantages outweigh in large part the inconveniences. It is the conclusion of the author that industry in the United States is better equipped than anywhere else.

Logan, J: Alex., jr. In joyful Russia; with many il. in col. and black and white. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 10+275 p. pors. O. cl., $3.50.

The author disclaims from the first any intention of writing a social tract, a political or economic study, or a guide-book He went with a man friend to Russia to see the coronation of the Tsar, and met his mother in Moscow, where they kept house Russian fashion for a short time With a delightful humor he describes all he saw, from the streets and the people of the streets to royalty and the coronation and all that followed. He also visited St Petersburg, and gives chapters on Russian horses; Russian races; The Russian church, Village life; Slavic literature and Slavic art He found much to admire and little to condemn in his pleasant experience.

Logia Jesou (ΛΟΓΙΑ ΙΗΣΟΥ): Sayings of our Lord; from an early Greek papyrus, discovered and edited, with translation and commentary, by Bernard P. Grenfell and Arthur S. Hunt. With 2 plates. Published for the Egypt Exploration Fund. N. Y., Oxford University Press, 1897. 20 p. 2 pl. O. pap., 15 c.

Three young Oxford scholars in the course of their labors for the Egypt Exploration Fund found a leaf from a papyrus book at Behnesa, about 1 0 miles south of Cairo. It is 5¾ by 3¾ inches in size and contains eight sayings ascribed to Christ. Each begins "Jesus saith." This leaf is photographed from both sides and given in facsimile Of the eight "logia" two are undecipherable and four are substantially identical with familiar passages in the Gospels These sayings are believed to date from somewhere between 150 and 300 A.D. This pamphlet gives a general history of the discovery, the facsimile, the Greek text of the logia, the English translation, and many notes and general remarks

Lush, C: K. The federal judge: a novel. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 3+355 p. D. cl., $1 25.

American life of to-day is the background. The "Judge" is an upright man who has gained a reputation as a friend of the people and a rigid opposer of great corporations. A railway magnate, whose road is exposed to attack, secures the appointment of this man as a federal judge, and the story consists largely in the dramatic portrayal of the relations which these two men bear to each other—the honest judge, under the influence of a great business manager, and the manager seeking to shield and strengthen his vast corporation with the judge's authority and good reputation.

This volume commences with the events immediately succeeding the fall of the Bastille, and ends with the close of the Constituent Assembly. It not only gives a highly interesting and picturesque account of the exciting events from July 14, 1789 to September 3, 1791, but it shows a sincere desire to be impartial, and carefully summarizes conflicting reports of disputed events. The best feature of the book is that it presents an orderly narration without lessening one's sense of the confusion of the times. The reader obtains a crisp, bird's-eye view of the period, and yet hears the tumult of passions which impels the actors.

The Western Insurrection of 1794 was one of the most important events in the early history of the United States, yet this period is comparatively unknown, possibly because the title popularly given it, the "Whiskey insurrection," has seemed to indicate a trivial event. This romance presents a really accurate picture of the rise, development, and suppression of the movement It also portrays the life of a race which had a large part in laying the foundations of our western and southwestern commonwealths—the Ulster-Scots, or "Scotch-Irish." The rise of the Democratic party is also depicted in the sketches of the "Democratic Societies."

The Sept, or group of families referred to in the present history, were derived from a common ancestor and occupied from the fifth to the seventeenth century a definite area of land situated in the centre of County Clare, Ireland. These people were frequently assailed by Norsemen, Anglo-Normans, and by the English, but they successfully defended their lands and homes against invaders for twelve hundred years, and were then dispersed, but by no means exterminated, by Cromwell. Throughout this long period of time the members of this Sept remained an almost pure race, living under the Brehon laws, and engaged principally in agriculture. The history of a Sept is not only an interesting study under these circumstances, but throws much light on the Irish character.

Magnay, Sir W: The fall of a star: a novel. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 8+269 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The "star" was a young man of wonderful talent in the House of Commons. He was engaged to an earl's daughter He rested from his efforts for his country in a beautiful English country place in an old castle once used as a hunting lodge by Henry VIII. Visitors at the earl's neighboring castle one night visited him in his solitude where he cheered himself with chemistry and other sciences. One man made a discovery, his friend, an enthusiastic geologist, made another, and the consequences of these mysteries have been cleverly worked into a story of the fall of this star brought about by amateur detectives.

"Men may rise on stepping-stones of their dead selves to higher things" is the keynote of the novel. Duncan Traser, a scientist who is in need of money to perfect his experiments, makes a conditional proposal to a wealthy widow, who had married her first husband for his fortune. When Rhoda Gwyn is his wife, Duncan loses sight of his own mercenary act, and in his heart condemns Rhoda for her past; she too has repinings. The conclusions of both hero and heroine are surprising Mahan, Alfred Thayer. The life of Nelson, the embodiment of the sea power of Great Britain. Bost., Little, Brown & Co, 1897. c. 2 v., 22+454; 16+427 p. maps, por. il. O. cl., $8.

While complete in itself, this important work, upon which the author has been engaged during the past few years, forms a third book in the series of works upon "sea power," begun seven years ago with "The influence of sea power upon history." In the career of Nelson, British sea power reached its supremacy and its greatest achievement. Apart from the interest attaching to the public career of the greatest sea-fighter the world has known, Nelson's life as a man was romantic to a degree. The author has examined with patience and with care Nelson's voluminous correspondence and despatches, and many other sources of information. His aim has been to make Nelson describe himself—tell the story of his own inner life as well as his external actions.

There are few figures in the musical world of to-day so well known to the American public as the great teacher of singing, who has numbered among her pupils such artists as Mme. Melba, Mme. Gerster, Mme. Emma Eames, Mme. Emma Nevada, and many others conspicuously before the public in recent years. Since childhood Madame Marchesi has lived in the atmosphere of music, and she has been associated with nearly all the great representatives of its various branches —with composers, critics, managers, and teachers, as well as performers. This book contains the record of a strenuous and successful career, including, as it does, reminiscences of Liszt, Mendelssohn, Manuel Garcia, Meyerbeer, Rossini, Auber, Berlioz, Rubinstein, and Verdi.

Marston, Rob. B. War, famine, and our food-supply. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 25+215 p. il. D. cl., $1.

This book is the outgrowth of an article published by Mr Marston in the Nineteenth Century of Feb., 1896, called "Corn stores for war-time," in which he pointed out the difficulty in case of war and a blockade of her ports, of Great Britain obtaining her foreign food-supply, and suggested that she should store a year's supply of corn in granaries throughout the kingdom. This article called forth comments and criticisms, many letters from noted men, and excited discussions in Parliament. The article is here reprinted, and all other matter that it drew out.

Mason, A. E. W. Lawrence Clavering. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. 3+372 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Lawrence Clavering, who relates the story in the first person, is supposed to be a kinsman of Henry St. John, Vicomte Bolingbroke. The time during which the events pass is the period after Lord Bolingbroke had begun to oppose the accession of the house of Hanover and had gone to France to take up arms for the Pretender, and become a force in the Jacobite uprising in Scotland in 1714. A picture painted by a man whom the hero had allowed to be imprisoned in his stead plays an important part in the story. By the author of "The courtship of Morrice Buckler."

Mason, A. E. W. The philanderers. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 232 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story revolves around an incident in South Africa told in the prologue. In an expedition against Boruwimi, led by Captain Stephen Drake, an Englishman under his command commits murder and theft, and is tried by Drake's orders and hung. Drake returns to London a hero and meets old friends, and is accidentally thrown into the society of the girl to whom the man Gorley (that he had hung) had been engaged. He learns to love her, but the African story greatly misrepresentated comes between them, and also interferes with his election to Parliament.

Matheson, G:, D.D. Lady Ecclesia: an autobiography. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. 8+332 p. D. cl, $1.75.

An allegory, in which all the characters are representative. According to the author, who is minister of the parish of St Bernard's, Edinburgh, "Ecclesia—the New Testament word for the Church—represents that inner life of Christianity itself which was originally the flower of Judaism. Hellenicus represents that phase of the Greek mind which came into brief contact with the flower of Judaism The Lord of Palatine represents the Roman Emperor, but not any particular emperor; Caiaphas, the Jewish Priesthood, but not any special priest; Phœbe—the letter-carrier of the Apostle—stands for the ministrant influence of the new faith; the captain of the guard figures the imperial system."

Matheson, G:, D.D. Sidelights from Patmos. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. 8+350 p. D. cl., $1.75.

Twenty-one meditations rather than sermons upon the lessons taught by the Book of the Revelation of St. John the Divine. The one question the author wishes to consider is "whether St. John's ideal is still our ideal, and whether we should still accept his principles as those which should regulate the good time coming." Compares the revelations with modern ideas of optimism.

Mead, Mrs. Irene M. The English language and its grammar. Bost., Silver, Burdett & Co., 1896. c. 265 p. D. cl., 75 c.

First gives a brief history and general view of the English language, showing the sources of its forms of speech, and its assimilation of different elements into a constantly increasing vocabulary; then analyzes the principles upon which rules are based, and by stimulating the pupil's reflective powers enables him to use trained judgment in the use of words and sentences; it thus makes language a living vehicle of thought, by inducing original forms of expression, both oral and written, and marks the close connection between grammar and psychology. For use in high schools, seminaries, and teachers' training classes.

The author, who is widely known in connection with physical culture, dress reform, and other practical subjects, here deals with the intangible and inexplicable theme of the mysterious attraction or repulsion of men and women. In lengthy conversations the problems of temperament, heredity, class distinctions, physical and mental attractions, are handled, also the advisability of divorce, remarriage, etc. The book introduces three thoroughly unselfish men who live up to their unconventional convictions, and two beautiful women, who after ruining the lives of these three men, succeed in making two other men very happy.

The writer details the way in which she came to understand and accept the method of healing mental and bodily ailments set forth in this work. The methods employed are chiefly prayer and faith, and the casting aside of all fear for the present or future or the hereafter, and giving up the inculcated beliefs in sin, or death, or illness The chapters teach the way to treat patients and give the material used by the writer in lecturing throughout the country.

Mills, Willis, M.D. Scarlet, or white? N. Y., Authors' Pub. Assoc., [1897.] c. 2–172 p. S. cl., $1.
The story is a plea for the so-called "fallen" woman; the author condemns a double standard of morals, and asks that the woman who has erred is given the same chance to redeem her past as is offered to the man. His heroine has been the innocent victim of a wealthy Chicagoan; deserted, hopeless, and desperate, she is rescued from suicide by a good man who offers her an education; she is placed under the care of a noble woman, who restores her self respect and helps her to a career of usefulness

Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 22+402 p. pors. il. fac-similes, O. cl., $2.50.

Pleasant, sketchy talks about American writers and the surroundings which influenced them, with some details of their personalities. They begin with the "northern pilgrims" and "quaint annalists" of the early colonial times, the Winthrops, Dr. Jonathan Edwards, Chief Justice Sewall, and Thomas Paine. After follow chapters on: Brown's novels, Audubon, Alexander Wilson, Cooper, Fitz-Greene Halleck, Washington Irving, Mrs. Sigourney, Catharine Sedgwick, Prescott, and others, the volume concluding with William Cullen Bryant. The portraits and views are quite rare.

This volume opens in the Lake country of England with Robert Southey; following him are the figures of Christopher North, Campbell, Scott, Sydney Smith, Gifford, Landor, Leigh Hunt, Moore, Bulwer and Disraeli, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Macaulay, Marryat and James: we are told something of their personalities, their writings, the history of the time, with many pleasant anecdotes in line with the previous volumes of the series

Mitchell, Rev. Hinckley Gilbert. Isaiah: a study of chapters i.–xii. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1897.] c. 2–263 p. O. cl., $2.

Prof Mitchell, of the Boston University, follows up his excellent work on Amos, with a translation of the first twelve chapters of Isaiah and a series of studies. He first builds up from such material as is offered to the scholar a fascinating biography of the prophet; he then gives a careful historical sketch of the existing times during which Isaiah lived. In a chapter on the prophecies of Isaiah he offers his reasons for supporting the views of the higher criticism in regarding the book as a welding together of various earlier and later manuscripts. A list of books and authors cited (5 p.).

Mitchell, J: A. Gloria victis. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 2+269 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A man who is an athlete with wonderfully honest eyes, and is at the same time a professional thief, forger, and murderer; his wife, who neglects her home and has fits of insane rage, during which she breaks the furniture and must be held by a special method; and their son, a boy of eleven, with his father's wonderful health and more wonderful eyes, his mother's temper, and his own genius for lying and stealing, are the chief characters. Staten Island and New York City furnish the scenery. The father and mother disappear, the son becomes a circus acrobat, and is finally loved into virtue by an ideal clergyman and a woman trapeze performer.

Social life in Philadelphia during and before the Revolution is graphically pictured, as are also the exciting scenes of the Revolutionary war itself, the time covered being from 1753 to 1783. Among the characters in the story are Washington, Franklin, Benedict Arnold, and Major André. The hero, Hugh Wynne, is the son of a Philadelphia Quaker descended from good Welsh stock, and his mother is French. Hugh chafes under the restraints of the Society of Friends, and is finally read out of meeting. He becomes a soldier, is captured at the battle of Germantown, suffers for months in a British prison, is afterward on Washington's staff, and witnesses Cornwallis's surrender. A strong love element runs through the story.

Montgomery, D: H. The student's American history. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1897. c. 7+523+55 p. pors. maps, O. (Leading facts of history ser.) cl., $1.55.

This work follows the same general lines as the author's "Leading facts of American history." It differs, however, from the more elementary manual in many important respects. It is much fuller in its treatment of political and constitutional history, and of the chief events bearing on the development of the nation It quotes original documents, authorities, and standard writers on the points of greatest interest to the student and the teacher, the object being to let the history of our country speak for itself. As a help to further research, note numbers have been inserted throughout referring to upwards of two thousand works of acknowledged merit cited in the appendix (9 p). There is also a classified list of books on American history covering 6 pages.

Montgomery, J., and Smith, R. B. Laboratory manual of elementary chemistry. Ann Arbor, Mich., G: Wahr, 1897. 5+ 155 p. il. O. cl., $1.

Intended for a laboratory guide; should be used in connection with a good text-book, or a course of lectures fully illustrated by experiments The book calls for no work that may not be done by the average high-school pupil.

Montgomery, Ja. L. Modern book-keeping: single and double entry. N. Y., Maynard, Merrill & Co., 1897. c. 240 p. D. cl., 80 c.

A manual especially adapted to class instruction, by the instructor in book-keeping in the Columbia Grammar School. It shows that book keeping is not an intricate subject when divested of the elaborate and useless theories with which it is often encumbered. Beginning with single entry, at a point within the comprehension of a school-boy, the subject has been logically developed by arranging the topics in a natural and progressive order. The work can be used without difficulty by teachers who have had no previous experience in teaching book-keeping.

Montrésor, Frances Frederica. At the cross-roads. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. 4+425 p. S. cl., $1 50.

A practical joke played upon a young author by his friend sends him to prison for six years. On his release he visits Africa, works in the diamond-field and becomes immensely rich. All this time the woman he had been engaged to before his trial had worked and waited for him in London—loving him and believing absolutely in his innocence He seeks her again, a reckless, sullen man, with a bitter sense of injustice done him. Then, and again in their married life, it seems better, first to the man, then to the woman, that they should part—hence the title. The man's innocence is finally established.

Mooney, W. D. A brief Latin grammar. N. Y., American Book Co., [1897.] c. 6+ 272 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The author feels that there is an imperative need for such a brief manual of Latin grammar as the French and Germans have had for years Such a manual, intended primarily for use in secondary schools, can be made brief by omitting exceptional usages and by reducing the usual array of quotations to a minimum, and simplified by stating the leading facts of the language clearly and concisely. The present work designed to cover the ground mentioned is largely the outgrowth of practical experience in the class-room

Morris, J: G., D.D. Life reminiscences of an old Lutheran minister. Phil., Lutheran Pub. Soc., [1897.] c. '96. 396 p. por. D cl., $1.25.
Dr. Morris was born in York, Pa., on Nov. 14, 1808; he died at Lutherville, Md., Oct. 10, 1895. The closing chapter of his life is written by his grandson, the Rev. C: R Trowbridge. He was a distinguished leader in the Lutheran church, and his work is naturally full of interesting biographical matter of state and church gathered in his long life. Student life in the early days of the century at Princeton and Dickinson colleges and at Nazareth, Pa., and at Gettysburg Seminary is full of interest.

The author bases his history on Polybius and Livy. Both were inclined to take the side of Rome against Carthage. Scarcely a phrase, not a line of correspondence eminating directly from Hannibal, who towers over all the figures of his age, is available. The grandeur of his nature and achievements are found best described in Mommsen's "History of Rome," the description of the military organization of Rome and Carthage, in Colonel Dodge's Hannibal. From all these sources the author has compiled a very good addition to the fine series to which this work belongs.

"The present is a complete concordance to the text of the Greek Testament, as set forth in the latest and best critical editions. A somewhat different principle, therefore, has been adopted and carried out than in earlier works of this class. The Greek text of Drs Westcott and Hort, published at Cambridge and London, 1881, has been assumed as the standard, and with this have been compared the texts of the eighth edition of Tischendorf, and of the English revisers Marginal readings also have in all cases been included. Accordingly no word or phrase which finds a place in any one of these three editions is excluded from the Concordance "—Preface.

Suggestions for selecting and using materials and tools necessary in the present method of manual training. No attempt is made to teach proficiency in the use of tools, the author contending that this can only be acquired by personal experience and through a course of instruction. In the choosing of working models the boy's personal taste is considered and aim is made to include designs which will be of practical use in the teaching of geometry.

Nall, Rev. G. H. Macmillan's elementary Latin-English dictionary, to the prose writings of Cæsar, Sallust, Nepos, Livy, Eutropius, and portions of Cicero, and the poems of Catullus, Vergil, Horace, Ovid, and Phædrus; for use in preparatory schools and junior forms. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 8+432 p. D. cl., $1.

Modelled on the lines of a simple vocabulary and prepared to meet the needs of young pupils. Practical experience proves that numerous examples and quotations, though valuable and necessary for older and more advanced pupils, bewilder rather than help the youthful beginner.

Nansen, Fridtjof. Farthest north: being the record of a voyage of exploration of the ship Fram, 1893-96, and of fifteen months' sleigh journey by Dr. Nansen and Lieut. Johansen; with an appendix by Otto Sverdrup. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 2 v., 10+587; 7+714 p. pors. map, il. 8°, cl., $10.

Dr. Nansen penetrated farther north than any previous Arctic explorer. Besides the immense value of his observations to physical geography, geology, and meteorology, his voyage determined that the Polar Sea is a deep basin and not a shallow body of water, covered, as supposed, with many islands. His work is divided into three parts, the first is taken up with Dr. Nansen's departure and the life of the whole party on the Fram previous to the great sledge journey; the second tells the story of the sledge party, led by Dr. Nansen across trackless ice-fields, during fifteen months of darkness; the third part is the history of the Fram during Nansen's absence, taken from the diaries of Capt. Sverdrup. Profusely illustrated from photographs taken on the expedition and with sixteen original colored illustrations of Arctic sunsets and aurora borealis effects from chalk drawings by Dr. Nansen.

Napier, G: G. The homes and haunts of Sir Walter Scott. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 14+216 p. il. 8°, buckram, net, $10. [Ed. limited to 550 copies.]

Napoléon Bonaparte, [Napoléon I.] New letters of Napoléon I., omitted from the edition published under the auspices of Napoleon III.; from the French, by Lady Mary Loyd. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. 18+380 p. por. D. cl, $2.

Napoleon III ordered during his reign the publication of the correspondence of Napoléon I., as a tribute to his memory. The work was done under the supervision of a committee, presided over by Prince Napoleon, between the years 1858 and 1869. Although the correspondence filled twenty-eight quarto volumes, a very large number of letters and documents remained unpublished, the committee believing they would not add to the reputation of the great emperor. It is from these inedited letters, etc—the most dangerous portion of Napoleon's correspondence—that Léon Lecestre the editor has made his selection. They cover the time between the years 1800 and 1815.

Nash, H. S. Genesis of the social conscience: the relation between the establishment of Christianity in Europe and the social question. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. 8+309 p. D. cl, $1 50.

Contents: How the establishment of Christianity in Europe created a question, What Greece and Rome contributed to the campaign against caste, Biblical monotheism puts the world in the service of God, and conceives God as an infinite missionary force in the service of the lowly; How the separation of church and state was necessary, to the end that the definition of the individual might be completed; The sovereignty of the church, the transcendence of the idea of God, and the isolation of the moral ideal in the monastery, raised the man without a grandfather to the spiritual peerage; History, not cosmology, is the marrow of the Christian view of the universe; The creation of the reformer's conscience; The eighteenth century as the open ground upon which the new definition deployed its forces.

Neill, C: Patrick. Daniel Raymond: an early chapter in the history of economic theory in the United States. Balt., Md., The Johns Hopkins Press, 1897. c. 3-63 p. O. (Johns Hopkins University studies, 15th ser., no. 6.) pap., 50 c.

In the year 1820 Daniel Raymond of the Baltimore Bar published a treatise on political economy, the first systematic treatise on economics from the pen of an American, showing the influence of American conditions and presenting a theory of political economy opposed at all points to the school of Adam Smith. The author first briefly sketches the condition of economic thought in America preceding the appearance of Raymond. His criticism of Raymond brings out Raymond's strong sense of personality, his warm human sympathy, his realization that man, not matter, is the subject of his study, that wealth is a means not an end, and that science is human not mechanical.

Noetling, W: Elements of constructive geometry inductively presented: from the German of K. H. Stöcker. Bost., Silver, Burdett & Co., 1897. c. 3–62 p. D. cl., 36 c.

The material is largely a translation of an excellent work prepared by K. H. Stocker, an eminent German mathematician It is based upon the inductive rather than the deductive method, and its plans constructive, the pupils drawing their own figures. It is purely elementary, and aims to furnish children in the lower grammar grades with a rudimentary knowledge of the subject. The exercises, which are simple in the beginning, increase in difficulty very gradually, and are both educative and practical.

Nordau, Max Simon. The drones must die; from the German. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham Co., 1897. c. 6–526 p. O. cl., $2.

The novel tells of the work and the heart histories of several Germans settled in Paris. The chief hero is a German professor, self-exiled from Berlin as a result of his socialistic labors, who after teaching steadily for eleven years is tempted to speculation on the Bourse by another German professor who has made a fabulous fortune. The first professor with his mother and wife remain true to all Teutonic ideas, the children absorb French ideas. Multi-millionaires, baronesses of obscure origin, and all kinds of Bourse operators play their parts to prove that only in honest work is lasting satisfaction.

Putnam's Sons, 1897. 330 p. D. (Hudson lib., no. 22.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The titles are: Mr. Sandford; and The wonderful history of Mr. Robert Dalyell. In the first story an English painter is the subject of psychological analysis. When he was sixty years old he realized that his skill and his fortune were on the wane His stoical acceptance of these sad truths are brought to an abrupt ending by the kindly intervention of Providence. The second story is an episode of Scotch life in which a man, likewise in his prime, and on the verge of financial ruin, tempts both the law and death to save his fortune.

Perfection City was the home of a community founded on the Kansas prairie "to teach the world how to live"; to "show the old and worn-out how to banish evil from life." Olive Weston comes in the opening chapters to "Perfection City" as a bride, very much in love with her husband and very much impressed with the advantages of community life as her good husband has set them forth. That human nature is in no way different here from the human nature of the rest of the world is very amusingly illustrated.

C: N: Oudinot, Duke of Reggio, was one of the most distinguished of Napoleon's marshals; he was instrumental in winning the battle of Zurich, was present under Massena at the defence of Genoa; he afterward became commander-in-chief of grenadiers, winning with his famous division the battle of Ostrolenka, and deciding the fate of at least three great battles—Austerlitz, Friedland, and Wagram. On the abdication of Napoleon he went over to the new government, and was made a peer by Louis XVIII. The marshal's wife was much with her husband in the field, and draws vivid pictures of his eventful career. The book comes down to about 1830.

Page, Emma E. Heart culture: a text-book for teaching kindness to animals; arranged for use in public and private schools. San Francisco, Cal., The Whitaker & Ray Co., 1897. c. 3+272 p. il. sq. D. cl., 75 c.

The aim of this book is to teach kindness to animals by quickening sympathy for them, arousing a sense of justice toward them, and instilling the fundamental principles of right care of them. This is done through numerous verses about birds, chickens, fish, butterflies, dogs, cats, etc., also little stories and anecdotes, descriptive and instructive selections, etc. Divided into chapters for reading; each chapter has a telling motto, and is followed by a list of questions for the teacher's use.

Page, T: Nelson. Social life in old Virginia before the war; il. by the Misses Cowles. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 5+109 p. O. cl., $1.50.

To partly correct the erroneous idea of the old south created through the works of northern writers, especially Mrs Harriet Beecher Stowe, and through the writers of plays, Mr. Page has written this little essay. It gives a delightful picture of a busy, useful, happy, hospitable life in which servants shared as well as every member of the family, old or young.

Pemberton, Max. Christine of the hills. N. Y., Dodd, Mead Co., 1897. c. 5+281 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

A tourist was cruising in a hired yacht among the islands of the Northern Adriatic, when the owner of the yacht exclaimed: "Yonder is the pavilion of little Christine." He then relates the story of the child and woman he had befriended through good and evil report. She was an Italian, utterly alone and neglected, with an artist's soul, living on a lonely beautiful island. She married, and on the wedding day her husband was forced to enter the Austrian service. She drifts to Vienna, and the plot is quite intricate. Finally as a tired woman, after many triumphs as artist, she is taken back to live among her beloved islands with one who always loved and cared for her wholly without thought of self.

Pennington, Mrs. Margaret, [Mrs. Clapman Pennington.] A key to the Orient. N. Y., J: Selwin Tait & Sons, 1897. c. 7+161 p. por. S. cl., $1 25.

The enthusiastic author endeavors to make real to her readers the differences of nature, custom, tradition, thought and feeling between the east and the west. She has found intense pleasure in her Oriental studies and experiences, and desires to share them with those who as yet hold most ignorant ideas of life "among the heathen." Mrs. Pennington dwells at special length upon the conditions of life of the eastern women, and she gives a poetic insight into the various forms of religion taught in the Orient All this information is grouped under four headings: The women of Islam; Oriental slavery; The missionaries as they appear to the heathen; and The religion of Zarathustra Spitama.

Perkins, Ja. Breck. France under Louis XV. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 2 v., 12+496; 12+488 p. O. cl., per set, $4.
Continues the history of France begun with Mr. Perkins's "France under the Regency." The first volume covers the ministries of the Duc de Bourbon and Cardinal Fleury and the de facto ministry of Madame de Pompadour; it treats of the war of the Polish succession, and the greater war of the Austrian succession, the French conquests in India, and the loss of everything there to the better-governed English. The second volume is devoted to the war of France with England, which resulted in the loss of New France.

The two volumes of this work, of which the second is yet to come, are sold separately. In this volume Mr. Peters tells of the organization of the expedition; of the trouble in obtaining an irade (permission to dig); his impressions of Constantinople; the discovery of Tiphsah; the visit to the city of Zenobia, etc., and of adventures met with on the way to Babylonia, the discovery of Nippur and how explorations were made there and in the Temple of Bel, the oldest temple in the world. These explorations, especially of the second year, described in the second volume, brought to light an enormous number of inscribed tablets, stones, bricks, etc., throwing light upon a period antedating all possible history by at least 2000 years. Maps and illustrations taken on the spot elucidate the narrative. The second volume contains chapters on America and return; Back to Nippur; A successful campaign; General results; The oldest temple in the world; The court of columns; Trench by trench; Coffins and burial customs; Miscellaneous; History of Nippur; A journey to Ur; Nejef and Kerbela; Conclusion.

N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1897. c. 4–305 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.75.
William Wetmore Story was born 1819 in Salem, Mass., and died 1896 in Rome, Italy. The writer of this collection of biographical reminiscences was introduced to Mr. Story by Miss Eliza Allen Starr, of Chicago, who desired to learn all particulars about the artist for her "Lectures upon living artists." The manuscript for this lecture and many manuscripts in Mr. Story's handwriting have been used in preparing the book. Appendix gives bibliography of Mr. Story's writings (3 p.); list of works of sculpture (4 p.).

Phillpotts, Eden. Lying prophets: a novel. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1897.] c. '96. 496 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The scene is Penzance, Cornwall, England The story opens with a conversation among painters of different schools The hero is an artist devoted to realism—truth in every detail. He wants a girl to sit among his heather and gorse, and finds one who as model learns to love him. There is nothing new in her story, but she is of far stronger character than the usual frail heroine, and her thoughts and actions show originality. The description of the Luke-gospellers, a religious sect to which poor Joan's father belonged, and the fishermen's lives, is very realistic.

Margot's father, a rich Englishman, who had been estranged from Margot and her mother for years, at last sent his private secretary to Paris to find the girl. Margot was an art student, who, finding her means inadequate to complete her studies, became a book illustrator and supported herself comfortably The story describes her art surroundings and her friends. There had been a secret in her career which weighed upon her. The scene shifts between England, Paris, and Russia. The private secretary finally took charge of Margot himself.

One of the exciting causes of this work was a pamphlet by Prof. Harnack, of the Berlin University, presenting the reasons for abolishing our Apostles' creed as a disgrace to our present century. It upholds Christianity as the work of God, by aiming to show that all scientific discoveries, so far from contradicting it, demonstrate its divine origin. It obtains its title, "Forty dollars and the boots," from an opening incident, which is warmly discussed by a number of persons. The discussions are offered as proof of the fallacies of many arguments and so-called facts.

Pierson, Arthur Tappan, D.D. Shall we continue in sin? A vital question for believers answered in the word of God: the substance of addresses delivered in Great Britain and Ireland in 1896. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., [1897.] c. 3-122 p. D. buckram, 75 c.

The topic of this book is St Paul's discussion, in Romans VI., VII. and VIII. of the duty and privilege of non-continuance in sin. The doctrine of sinlessness is not here taught, but of not continuing in sin. The disciple's security for non-continuance in sinning is found in his union with Christ. This union with Christ is considered in a seven-fold aspect, and is treated under as many chapter headings, as Judicial, Vital, Practical, Actual, Marital, Spiritual, and Eternal.

The first part of this paper contains a critical analysis of the most important features of the revenue laws of California. The second contains a study of the practical working of the law. The first part shows that the law prescribes a form of the general property tax, which conforms closely to that which is theoretically the best form of that tax. The second shows that the law is not successfully administered. The conclusion is that no general property tax can be administered under present economic conditions in the United States, so as to conform to the demands of justice in taxation.

Amos Walton, a millionaire New York bachelor, is found dead in his house with twenty-nine wounds on his body. His diamonds, watch, and chain were stolen, but a large sum of money in his pocket remained untouched The question is who committed the murder. Mr. Walton's nephews being suspected, especially his heir Charles, who had married the foster sister of a gambler. It is only after twenty years' search that the murderer is found.

The purpose of the novel is to emphasize the folly of compelling marriage for social and mercenary motives, also to show that suffering inevitably follows a moral transgression. Kingdon Dale and Ida Bruce, prominent figures in Boston's social life, were betrothed through the misdirected efforts of both their parents. Kingdon afterwards fell in love with an English girl, and asked for release. Being refused, he married as he contracted, and is seen in an unenviable rôle.

Praed, Mrs. Rose Murray Campbell. Nulma: an Anglo-Australian romance. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 3+291 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 220.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The story opens about 1870 with the coming to Leichardt's Town, Australia, of the new governor, who is a widower, his nephew Lord Arthur Keefe (who is also his private secretary), and his wife, and the new Chief Justice, Outram Kenward, Q. C. The reason Mr Kenward gives for throwing up a lucrative practice in London for life in Australia, is the climate prescribed by his physician for his weak lungs. But he loves Lady Keefe, and is loved by her in return. Nulma, from whom the story takes its name, is a beautiful Australian, who wins the admiration of the Chief Justice, and the jealousy of Lady Keefe. Her story is strongly influenced by these two people.

Praed, Mrs. Rose Murray Campbell. The romance of a châlet: a story. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1898 [1897.] c. '91. 2–305 p. D. (Lippincott's select novels, no. 197.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A story dealing with the question of heredity. The characters are introduced in Switzerland. The heroine is supposed to be an American of wealth travelling for diversion. The hero is an Englishman of rank, who holds pronounced views on the subject of inherited taints, and who, knowing that there is a tendency to insanity in his family, hesitates about declaring his love for Constance Van Klaft. Overcoming his scruples finally, he proposes to Miss Van Klaft. Soon after he is her accepted lover he learns that Constance's family history resembles his own. The action of the lovers is dramatic and interesting.

Prince, Mrs. Helen Choate. A transatlantic chatelaine. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 2+465 p. D. buckram, $1.25.

Sylvia Edwards, the "chatelaine," is born in France, but returns with her American father after her mother's death to live near Boston; she lives a lonely life here with a couple of old servants and her father and his friend, Dick Huntington. When the Civil War breaks out Huntington and her father offer their services to the government, and Sylvia is persuaded to marry Huntington, that she may inherit his wealth and be provided for if her father is killed. Both men lose their lives; Sylvia goes abroad to live and finds a home in France during the Franco-German war, and makes an unhappy marriage with a titled Frenchman.

Prior, Ja. Ripple and flood: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. 6+378 p. D. (Lippincott's select novels, no. 193.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The hero, who had spent the greater part of his life in Nottinghamshire, gives his early impressions of the ripple and flood of the River Trent; describing especially the tragic scenes that occurred after a memorable flood-tide, in which Ivy Sivil, the heroine, is an interesting figure; telling finally why he leaves Nottinghamshire and the part he plays in the tragedy, which is the means of reuniting him with Ivy.

Pryce, R: Elementary Jane. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1897. c. 3+331 p. D. (Hudson lib., no. 26.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Just before the modest and very timid little heroine began her career as a music-hall singer in London she was asked by a theatrical agent by what name she wished to be billed; through a lack of imagination she gave her real rather commonplace name, Jane Smith, which was converted by the wily agent into "Jenny Tandem." The professional experiences of Jenny Tandem, with her pathetic love-story and incidents of her matrimonial venture, are given in a novel dealing with cockney life as it applies to the workman and the mountebank

Pyke, Rafford. The adventures of Mabel; il. by Mélanie Elisabeth Norton. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. '96. 5+245 p. O. cl., $1.75.

Mabel, who was about six years old, went into the woods one day to gather strawberries; hearing a queer little sound, as if some one was in pain, she looked about her and found a little green lizard fastened to the ground by a big stone that had fallen on its tail. Mabel releases the lizard, who in turn teaches her to understand animal talk, and how to make animals understand her when she talks, and also how to make animals good to her. The result is many odd adventures, in which animals figure.

Raine, Allen. Mifanwy: a Welsh singer. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 6+326 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 224.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Welsh peasant life, with the passionate love of music inherited by the Welsh people, is pictured by a writer who writes intelligently and also enthusiastically about music. Mifanwy is a shepherdess with a beautiful voice, who at fifteen can neither read nor write. She leaves home to go out as a servant, drifts into a circus, where she finds friends who help her to a musical education, and finally becomes famous in London as a concert singer. A boy who had watched sheep with "Mifanwy" is carried to London by a rich man, and makes a reputation as a sculptor. The love of these two characters for each other pervades the story.

Ramsay, W. M. Impressions of Turkey during twelve years' wanderings. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1897. 16+296 p. O. cl., $1.75.

The author, who is now professor in Aberdeen University, in 1893 published some studies of Asia Minor, prepared for his students at Mansfield College, Oxford. It is chiefly of Asiatic Turkey that he speaks from wide knowledge of the subject gained from five years of study preceding his twelve years of travel. He was trained as explorer under Sir Charles Wilson. The work of the American missionaries, the Armenians, the Mohammedan races, the government and officials, and the Greeks in Asiatic Turkey receive special attention. Though strong in the belief of the imperial mission of Great Britain the author has learned to appreciate the high qualities of other great nations.

Comprises the substance of several monographs that the author has published from time to time in medical journals. He has added histories of many typical cases, illustrating the results of eye-treatment alone upon various forms of nervous disturbances that had failed to yield to any other treatment. He traces to eye-strain many cases of headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, chorea, epilepsy, nervous prostration, and insanity, and gives clinical evidence to sustain his convictions.

W. Rogers. Cin., O., Curts & Jennings, 1897. c. 11+432 p. por. il. maps, O. cl., $3.

The Assyrian and Babylonian discoveries of Mr. Rassam were among the very first in this field, and among the most important He first struck the spade into many a mound almost unknown; he brought to Europe many a long-lost book. Until now no detailed account has been made of his discoveries, while in many instances credit for them has been given to other explorers. His first journeys date back to 1853, and he gives here ample reasons for not having sooner published an account of them.

Raymond, Walter, ["Tom Cobbleigh," pseud.] Charity Chance. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1896. c. '96. 4+256 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The love-story of a young English girl, adopted as a baby by a wealthy single woman, who is a cripple. "Charity," wishing to please her patroness, accepts her nephew, for whom at first she has only a sincere liking. A modern poet of the pessimistic school for a time claims her regard, and "Charity" begins to write and becomes a famous novelist. The poet's lack of principle and the innate nobility of her benefactress's nephew are potent factors in her story.

Rayner, E. Free to serve: a tale of colonial New York. Bost., Copeland & Day, 1897. c. 2+434 p. D. cl., $1.50.

For the background of this romantic story the author has chosen a little-worked but extremely interesting time and place—New York in the early eighteenth century, when the manners and customs were part Dutch and part English, with Indians and Frenchmen lurking in the shadows. The romance has a new scheme of plot, and hurries on through a series of vivid adventures in the lives of two brothers and the handmaid who is free to serve, but not to plight her troth till the end of the story.

Two-thirds of the stories circulated during the past couple of years by the American press concerning the condition of Cuba are declared by Mr. Rea, field correspondent of the New York Herald, after careful investigation to be untrue. Some of them were purposely reported by the insurgents, others made up in newspaper offices. Mr. Rea was with Gomez and Maceo, and had unusual opportunities for getting at the truth. He reviews and explodes many "leading fakes."

The interest centres in Major John Cranceford, an ex-Confederate and a planter of Arkansas, and his daughter, who desires to marry a man hopelessly ill with consumption. She is loved by another man, strong and healthy, to whom her father would willingly give her. Incidentally the political relation of the negroes to the whites is touched upon.

Read, Opie P., ["Arkansaw traveller," pseud.] Bolanyo: a novel. Chic., Way & Williams, 1897. c. 4+309 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Bolanyo is a town on the Mississippi River, built on the site of an old Spanish fort. An actor, named Belford, who was hurt in a river disaster, is brought to the house of the Senator of Mississippi. Belford becoming very much attached to his benefactor's daughter, there follows a love-story which has both tragic and romantic issues.

Includes the more recent conclusions which have been arrived at by workers in different branches of the subject. "This little book," the author says, "will have achieved an important result if it tends to make more generally known the fact how valueless—and, moreover, how dangerous—it is to rely upon so-called rough-and-ready tests for forming an opinion upon the purity of a doubtful water."

Ripley, F: H., and Tapper, T: Natural course in music series. V. 7, The advanced music reader. N. Y., American Book Co., [1897.] c. 326 p. O. bds., $1.

This is the seventh book of the "Natural course in music," but it may be used entirely independently. It is intended to meet the wants of classes in which bass voices have begun to develope, and yet much of the music is arranged so as to be complete if the bass is omitted. Without attempting to review the elements of music, it yet presents material intended for elementary instruction. For this reason the book will serve well for normal schools, and for choral classes, in which adults receive their first musical training.

The scene is in Normandy. Loys De Vallon, returning after years of absence from his native land, falls in love with Yovanne Savaré. Before Yovanne acknowledges the love of De Vallon, her father, noted for having defeated William La Marck (The Wild Boar of Ardennes) in three encounters, attacks Loys and is slain through his own carelessness. For this De Vallon is condemned to death. The story tells how Yovanne rescued her lover from the gibbet.

Rives, Hallie Erminie. Smoking flax. N. Y. and Chic., F. Tennyson Neely, [1897.] c. 2–232 p. nar. S. cl., 50 c.

A novel which deals with lynch law as practised in the southern states. The scene is Georgetown, Kentucky. Elliott Harding, born in the south, of southern parentage on the father's side, and of northern descent on the mother's, holding pronounced views against lynching, is brought to a realization of the southern side of the question when his betrothed is dishonored and murdered Although attempt is made to present both sides of the question fairly, the writer's sympathies are southern.

The scene of the story is laid in the region about Grand Pré and Blomidon. The time is 1746–47, about eight years before the expulsion of the Acadians. The story is one of love and romance, of stirring adventure and heroic action. It deals with that fiery fringe of conflict that waved along the border between Old Acadia and New England. The hero, de Briart, is a Seigneur of Acadia who has refused to accept the English rule, and devotes his good sword to the service of the Fleur de Lis. His young son, a tall, dark stripling just from college at Quebec, is his close comrade and confidant. The women of the cast are two New England girls, Mistress Mizpah Hanford and her sister, Prudence. The evil genius of the story is the Black Abbé, whose intrigues and tireless enmity are the web and woof of the plot.

Purports to have been made up from the manuscripts of Christopher Robe, who fought with General Jackson at the battle of New Orleans in 1814. It is a story of many events relating to the pirates of Barataria and their descendants, who afterwards ranked among the first families of Virginia It covers a splendid period of American history, when our nationality asserted itself lustily. Descriptions of Louisiana and the unique social life of New Orleans during the administration of General Jackson are skilfully worked into the romantic episodes of a tale true to history in all military and political facts.

Roth, E: American schoolboys to sixteen: a talk with parents on a course of education. Phil., [published by the author, E: Roth,] 1897. c. 2–30 p. S. pap., 10 c.

The author lays special stress upon the fact that school is not the place for learning certain branches of knowledge, but for learning how to learn The great principles of duty, justice, right and wrong must be taught, then every talent must be cultivated and no particular one must be allowed to overshadow the rest. After sixteen, when the intellect has been taught activity and habits of industry have been formed, a young man may follow his special bent in choice of a lucrative profession. Specially dwells upon the advantage of small classes and individual teaching.

Rowe, Leo S. The problems of political science. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1897.] 17–38 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 207.) pap., 25 c.

Prof Rowe claims that recent speculation is still bound by the trammels of Austrian jurisprudence which is barren and unfruitful, devoted to the analysis of what is, but incapable with its method of showing how things have developed. He deplores the absence in political speculation of the evolutionary element which in other fields of science has been so fruitful.

Rowland, Reginald. An ambitious slave. Buffalo, N. Y., The Peter Paul Book Co., 1897. c. '96. 2+91 p. D pap., 25 c.

A simple story, and apparently a true one, of a negro born in slavery; he runs away from his master, makes his way to Boston, where he is bought by several citizens, who give him his freedom. He gets work, prospers, is in Washington the night before Lincoln is assassinated, overhears a conversation relating to the conspiracy, tries to warn the President, but is arrested as a "crank," etc.; his testimony after the President's death gives the detectives a clue to the murderer and his confederates.

Royall, W: L. History of the Virginia debt controversy: the negro's vicious influence in politics. Richmond, Va., G: M. West, 1897. c. 2–111 p. D. cl., 50 c.

Written to throw light upon what the author calls "the erroneous impression" the world has received concerning Virginia's action since our late war respecting her public debt. "The belief is abroad," he says, "that she failed to measure up to the obligations of her duty, and that she has in effect repudiated a part of her just obligations." The negro's vicious influence in her politics, he believes, is the cause of any shortcomings she may have been guilty of.

An excellent handbook for the student who wishes to learn the laws that underlie the art of poetry. Prof. Marchisio says: "This work is more than a mere translation of the Ars Poetica. It is more than a translation with notes, and more than a commentary. It is a paraphrase and critical study of Horace's masterpiece, entering closely into the thought of the original, and interpreting and illustrating with rare felicity and phrase and subtlety of conception every shade of its meaning."

Russell, Israel Cook. Glaciers of North America: a reading lesson for students of geography and geology. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1897. c. 10+210 p. map, il. O. cl., $1.90.

Until the past few years nearly all current knowledge of glaciers was based on the study of those of the Alps. As geological and geographical explorations have been extended, it has been found that North America is not only a favorable field for the growth of of these twin sciences, but in many ways furnishes the best example of continental development that has as yet been studied. Mr. Russell's aim has been not only to report the present condition in this country of an important branch of geological and geographical inquiry, but to make students familiar with glacial phenomena in general and stimulate a thirst for fresh explorations and renewed study along an almost untrodden path.

The writer aims, through a story, to prove that drunkenness is not hereditary; that children do not inherit their parents' vices; that where this weakness exists it may be overcome by the exertion of will. The heroine was born in New England in 1800 Until her thirteenth year she is under the worst influence, her father and brothers drinking to excess Finally, all but the girl are killed by liquor and a railroad accident. She is then transferred to the hands of an intelligent woman, who illustrates the writer's theories in her education, making a lovely, attractive woman out of her.

The author is president of the American Chirological Society. Paris is his home, but he has travelled and investigated in all parts of the world. For twenty-five years he has made a close study of hand-reading. He considers palmistry a science and supports his theories by many facts. The eighteen chapters of the book explain minutely and with many illustrations and diagrams the various lines and marks of the palm of the hand, the shape and peculiarities of the hand, fingers, finger-tips, nails, etc., showing the deductions relative to life and character that may be drawn from them.

J B. Saint-Jure wrote his life of Gaston Marquis de Renty in the first half of the seventeenth century, and an English translation was published at London in 1650 It was a favorite book of John Wesley. Mr. Murray thinks the two chapters here reproduced in part especially valuable as pointing to an element of the Christian life that is too much wanting in these days.

Written by the son of Dr. Schaff, who now holds the chair of Church History in Lane Theological Seminary so long held by his father. Dr Schaff was born in Switzerland in 1819, in poor circumstances, his father being a carpenter. He was educated in Germany and his mature life was spent in America. He was closely connected with the liberal movement in Bible criticism and with the Evangelical Alliance. He was a scholar of world wide reputation and was called upon to edit a vast amount of work The list of his writings and the works he has edited occupy eight pages of the volume. The theological instruction of young minds was his specialty, and the bulk of his work was prepared for students.

The humor of this little comedy hinges upon the fact that six young women (each of an entirely different temperament from the others) have flirted with a young collegian of their university town, and each believes him to be enamoured of her. They meet at tea, and, discovering that the young man has been writing the same letter to all six, they resolve upon a plan of action.

Schofield, J: M. Forty-six years in the army. N. Y., The Century Co., 1897. c. 15+577 p. por. O. cl., $3.

Covers General Schofield's forty-six years' service from his appointment to West Point in 1849 to his retirement from the command of the army, as Lieutenant-General, in 1895. Anecdotes of fellow-cadets who fought on the Confederate side, and of his famous colleagues in the Union army, abound in the work, and many new and important facts relating to the campaigns in which he took an active or leading part are given, notably in regard to the battle of Wilson's Creek, the operations in Missouri, and the campaign of Franklin and Nashville. That he does not shrink from controversy is shown by his comments on Thomas's conduct of the Nashville campaign and Sherman's march to the sea.

Seawell, Molly Elliot. The history of the Lady Betty Stair; il. by Thule de Thulstrup. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 3+144 p. D. cl., $1.25.
When his Royal Highness, the Count D'Artois, afterward Charles x., sought refuge in Scotland in 1798 after the dreadful days of "the terror," the Lady Betty Stair was called to attend his Princess at Holyrood. Lady Betty was a charming Scotch girl whose family—the Macdonalds—had always been loyal to the Stuarts, and who had been educated in France. Her brother Angus had been killed in France in a duel, and Lady Betty is led to believe that his adversary was one of two gentlemen in the suit of the Count. This leads to misunderstandings with a man she loves, and changes her whole life.

Sergeant, Adeline. The Lady Charlotte: a novel. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., [1897.] c. 274 p. D. cl., $1.
Although there are two young couples whose love affairs have strange developments, it is the Lady Charlotte Byng, a handsome woman of fifty, who is the chief character of the story. She is variously accomplished, has been a great traveller, and is a writer of books and sometimes a "reader" for publishing houses; also rides, rows, and is a first-class shot. A young man who has been her secretary, and has had access to family papers, writes a book based upon things he remembers in compiling papers for her, exposing family secrets best kept covered up. By mistake of a clerk his ms. is sent her from the publisher in place of one she is to read. Her punishment of the dishonorable writer is swift and sure.

Men and manners have been the life-long study of Mrs. John Sherwood, and she has come in contact with almost every celebrity in America and Europe during her pleasant life This volume contains random reminiscences of half a century, which are put together with literary skill, and will in years to come form an important addition to the social history of the last half of the nineteenth century. Webster was the friend of her girlhood, and she knew intimately Bancroft, Prescott, Emerson, George Ripley, Hawthorne, and all the New England illuminati.

Sherwood, Sidney. The philosophical basis of economics: a word to the sociologists. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1897.] 59–92 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 209.) pap., 35 c.

Which is fundamental, sociology or economics? This is the question propounded by Prof. Sidney Sherwood. The author supports the claim of economics. The activity by which human life is supported and through which society exists is individual activity. It proceeds from the will of the individual, and in this is fundamental. Economics is the study of the manifestations of this will, and takes precedence, therefore, of sociology.

Shorter, Clement K. Victorian literature: sixty years of books and bookmen. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. 3+231 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The volume is bibliographical, not critical. It aims to furnish the young student in handy form with as large a number of facts about books as can be concentrated in so small a volume. This is done in the form of consecutive narrative, to which the key is a full alphabetical index. Living poets and novelists have almost all been omitted The order of arrangement is the poets, the novelists, the historians, and the critics One of the books prepared in celebration of the Queen's Jubilee.

Shuey, Lillian Hinman. Don Luis' wife: a romance of the West Indies; from her letters, and the manuscripts of the padre, the Doctor Caccavelli, Marè Aurèle, Curate of Samana. Bost., Lamson, Wolffe & Co., 1897. c. 7+235 p. D. cl., $1 50.

Contains the true account of the experiences and adventures of a New England girl as the wife of a gentleman of fortune on the island of San Domingo It illustrates some of the entanglements of the fate of an American woman who marries a foreigner, especially one of rank and fortune. The story is supposed to have been confided to a Catholic priest.

Sienkiewicz, H: Let us follow him; from the Polish, by Jeremiah Curtin. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1897. c. 5+91 p. 1 il. S. cl., 50 c.

This story is included in the author's new volume entitled "Hania." It is published separately because special interest attaches to it since it gave the author the first idea of writing "Quo Vadis." Antea, the wife of a Roman patrician ill with terrible visions, is advised to seek the air of Jerusalem. There she meets Pilate and learns the story of Jesus and His condemnation to death, and later she is present at the Crucifixion.

The authors do not question the truth of any known facts regarding the laws of nature, but point out the incorrectness of the interpretations of these facts, as generally held. They dwell specially upon the principles of persistence, resistance, reciprocity and equalization, which if admitted in the new interpretation will necessitate the reconstruction of many present theories. By these principles they hope to make possible a uniform and harmonious explanation of all organic phenomena. They have not tried to discover any new force or to make practical application of those already existing, but have striven to reveal the cause of all forces. The chapters on heat, electricity, magnetism, etc., are calculated to raise much instructive controversy.

This handbook is of the same general scope as the "Handbook of the Boston Public Library." The intention is to furnish such an account of the new building of the Library of Congress as may prove of interest to the general reader, and at the same time serve as a convenient guide to actual visitors To this latter end a system of headings and subheadings has been introduced, and the building has been described throughout in the order in which a visitor might naturally walk through it Criticism has been avoided in the general description, but a brief survey of the artistic qualities of the architecture, sculpture, and painting is given in Mr. Caffin's essays.

Smeaton, Oliphant. By adverse winds. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., 1897. 5-448 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Scotland and Australia are in turns the scene of the story. A Scotch professor, of an old family and possessing wealth, one day finds himself ruined through unfortunate investments, and is on the point of selling his old home to pay his debts when he is saved by an old friend from Australia, a millionaire. To repay the debt, his pride exacts of his son, when arrived at manhood, that he shall marry the daughter of the Australian This leads to many complications and unhappy episodes.

Smith, Mrs. Eliz. Thomas, [formerly L. T. Meade.] A girl in ten thousand. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1897.] 5–224 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The heroine is an English girl, the daughter of a country doctor, who sacrificed his life for his profession. Believing herself fitted for a nurse, Effie Staunton began a course of training in St. Joseph's Hospital, London. Just as Effie was assured of success, she was forced to resign her charge. The story tells of her life thereafter, dwelling particularly on the incident that led to her being called "A girl in ten thousand."

Smith, Mrs. Eliz. Thomas, [formerly L. T. Meade.] Good luck. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., [1897.] 268 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A London story of a family of simple, hard-working young people, whose main support is the needlework done by the cheerful busy little grandmother Illness, loss of work, and unjust accusation of theft plunge them into a series of troubles from which the "good luck" that comes of pluck and hard work brings them finally to happiness again.

Smith, Mrs. Eliz. Thomas, [formerly L. T. Meade.] Merry girls of England; with 8 original il. by W. S. Stacey. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., [1897.] 4–288 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Four girls left orphans at a very young age were sent to their mother's school-teacher, who adopted them. This school-teacher dies seven years later and leaves the girls one thousand dollars and a farm-house. While at the farm-house they meet Hero Chevening, a young girl, tired of living with a cranky grandmother, who runs away with Barbara, one of the four sisters, who is writing a book. Why the book is unsuccessful and the experiences the girls have complete an interesting story for young readers.

Smith, Jessie R. Four true stories of life and adventure. N. Y., W: Beverley Harison, 1897. c. 125 p. D. cl., net, 36 c.

The story of Columbus, of Captain John Smith, of Captain Myles Standish, and Benjamin Franklin. Practically written by children, and designed to be read by them, not to them. Miss Smith first read the stories of these four historical characters to children, and afterward had them write them out in their own words. The result is simple, child like narratives that other children will enjoy.

The first edition of Dr Smith's "Smaller history of Greece" was published over thirty years ago In the light of the new knowledge acquired through the investigations of modern scholars the reviser has sought to correct the inaccuracies of the old edition and supply noteworthy omissions. The volume has been increased by about one fifth. Those chapters which deal with the constitutional history of Athens, the topography and monuments of that city, and the history of Greek literature have been entirely rewritten. A pronouncing vocabulary has been incorporated with the index, and a new series of maps, plans, and illustrations take the place of the old.

Smyth, Newman. The place of death in evolution. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 11+227 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Dr Smyth finds in the truths of science support and substantiation of the vital beliefs of Christianity concerning the mysteries of life and death. The book discusses: The entrance and use of death in nature; The path of life through the evil in nature; Scientific presumptions of immortality; The final discharge of death; The biological and the biblical view of death; The method of positive benevolence in the law of death.

Smythe, Alfred. Van Hoff; or, the new Faust. N. Y., American Publishers Corporation, [1897.] c. 322 p. il. D. buckram, $1; pap., 50 c.

The scientist Van Hoff, in his desire to rejuvenate blood and discover the secret of eternal youth, makes use of all the known agencies and forces, laying special hold on electricity. The studies derange his mind and he is confined in an insane asylum. During a thunder-storm he escapes, and meets specialists and experts who all have different theories. Spiritualism is introduced. The keynote of the book is "nothing is impossible"; its final chord, "Presume not to fathom the eternal mystery."

Charles Edward's, the Young Pretender's efforts to gain the throne for his father, the Pretender, and make him James III. of England, furnish the background of history for a novel of strong personalities and fierce emotions Fierceheart is an old man of seventy, who once more buckles on his armor to fight for his king, George II. His son joins the Highlanders The old soldier crushes all his parental love and deals with him strictly as a rebel through many gruesome scenes of physical and moral cruelty. The old mother, the old godfather, and the young sweetheart of the younger soldier suffer all things from the Roman sternness of old Fierceheart.

Snider, Denton Jaques. Homer's Iliad, with preliminary survey of the four literary Bibles: a commentary. St. Louis, Mo., Sigma Publishing Co., [1897.] c. 74+504 p. D. cl., $2.

This commentary and exposition of Homer's Iliad is the first volume in a series of books embracing nine volumes, in which are included expositions of the Odyssey, Dante's and Shakespeare's works, and Goethe's "Faust." These the writer calls "the literary Bibles." His aim is to show the unity of literature. Following the preliminary survey of the four literary Bibles are: An introduction to Homer; Contents and structure of the Iliad; Second wrath and reconciliation of Achilles.

Snider, Denton Jaques. Homer's "Odyssey": a commentary. St. Louis, Mo., The Sigma Publishing Co., 1897. c. '95. 534 p. O. cl., $2.

An exposition of the meaning and a prose narrative in English of the text of the "Odyssey." The writer has made a most careful and minute study of this classic, which will be of use both to the student and general reader. It is on the lines of the commentaries of "Iliad," Goethe's "Faust," Dante's "Inferno," and other works that he has issued.

Snider, Denton Jaques. Psychology and the psychosis: Intellect. St. Louis, Mo., Sigma Publishing Co., [1897.] c. '96. 556 p. D. cl., $2.

The following are some of the distinctive features of this work: It has the psychosis, which is a new thread woven through the entire science, and to a certain extent, transforming the same. Its procedure is that of mental evolution from beginning to end, thus bringing out strongly the connecting links of this science. It treats very fully the subject of symbolism, most important to educators and especially to kindergartners. It is not a physiological psychology, though the latter receives its due recognition in its proper field.

The author is Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Chicago. He claims children are too much assisted in all their work From beginning to end his purpose is to bring into view the quantitative relations of things He does not believe in teaching by formula His lessons are all object lessons and the rules are formulated by the pupils themselves after they have thoroughly grasped the facts and the process of thought by which they have reached an understanding of them This leaves scope for individuality of perception.

Insanity was an inheritance of the Camperdoun family. Miss Barbara Camperdoun refused to marry her cousin on account of this weakness, living her life out in single blessedness. On her cousin's death she finds herself heir to his fortune, and takes up her residence in his house at Woodsedge, a short distance from Boston. With her is her niece Luisa, whose love story is also abruptly concluded through this family trait, Dr Donner refusing to let his son marry her Dr. Donner's story is told at length. It illustrates the influence of a good woman on an evil nature.

The hero of the story was in the beginning the little motherless boy of a canal-boat captain, who cared for his baby sister while his father was away on the Merry Maiden. Later in his career, the young sailor who had made many voyages on the canal really goes to sea, and has the wonderful adventures described. Among the scenes of his voyage is an island inhabited by bloodthirsty savages, which is, owing to its treasure-trove, called "The Island of Gold."

During the Russian famine of 1892, Herr Stadling went to the distressed districts with funds collected for the relief work of Count Tolstoi. He accompanied the count on his mission of mercy and was busy not only with his pen but with his kodak. He published his experiences in a Swedish book "Frau det Hungrande Ryssland." The present book is based upon the Swedish one and has been entirely rearranged and rewritten by Will Reason The illustrations are reproduced from the originals used in the Swedish book The work gives a vivid description of the famine scenes, many side-lights on the general condition of the peasants, and the methods of government. Space is devoted to the rise of the Stundist religious movement and to the career of Prince Khilkov.

The second volume of a work that will be finally gathered under the general title of "Jesus Christ, his person, his authority, his work." V. 1, "Jesus Christ before his ministry," was published in 1896. Prof. Stapfer touches upon the events which occurred in the life of Jesus only so far as they serve to throw light upon what took place in his soul. "In this," he says, "as in the first volume, the reader will see that Jesus 'destroyed' nothing, and that he 'fulfilled' all things. This word is the key of many enigmas and contradictions."

The scene is in a large western city. Johnny Wilder was lingering in a grocery-store, hoping to earn a trifle for going on errands, when he saw the proprietor drop a dollar bill; believing himself unobserved he picked up the money and went home, but his conscience forbidding him to keep the dollar he returned it to the owner, becoming the hero in a story which shows through a series of similar incidents that "honesty is the best policy."

Mr. Stead says in his preface to the American edition: "The principle upon which this collection has been compiled is more American than English. For the basic idea of the book is that of appealing directly to the experience of the individual; that of applying the test not of the standard of excellence of the literary expert, or of orthodoxy as defined by the authority of churches, but that of its helpfulness to men and women." Contains also "A list of a best hundred hymns;" a classified list under persons of "Hymns and those whom they have helped." Index of first lines and index of authors.

Short stories of native and English life in India. The second one is the title story, "In the permanent way." Some of the others are: Shub'rât; On the second story; Glory-of-woman; At the great Durbar; The blue throated god; A tourist ticket; The king's wen; Young Lochinvar; The wings of a dove: The Fakeer's drum.

Steel, Mrs. Flora Annie. In the tideway. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. 3+155 p. S. cl., $1.25.

The scene is the Scotch Hebrides. A group of fashionable people from London, seeking pleasure and distraction, are the actors. What at first seems a comedy, between a man and woman, who loving each other have sacrificed themselves for wealth, ends in a thrilling tragedy.

Steel, Mrs. Flora Annie. On the face of the waters: a tale of the mutiny. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. '96, '97. 8+475 p. D. buckram, $1.50.

The story opens in 1856 at Lucknow, but is quickly transferred to Delhi, where it remains to the end. There is only one episode in the Sepoy rebellion that is directly dealt with—though we hear of the horrors of Cawnpore and Lucknow—the taking of Delhi in 1857 by General Nicholson. The scenes all lead up to this and are largely taken from native life, and give a vivid picture of the first mutterings of the storm. The characters are Europeans and natives and are sharply drawn. Of the first are Major Erlton and his wife, Jim Douglas, a cashiered officer serving the English government as a spy, and Mrs Alice Gissing. As each loves the wrong person, the plot is interesting. The life in Delhi during the siege is well portrayed. All the events bearing on the history of the time are scrupulously exact.

Stephens, Riccardo. Mr. Peters: a novel; with il. by E. M. Ashe. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 6+406 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The prologue gives the key to the story; it has its scene in a western camp: here an Italian who cannot speak English, is accused of having stolen horses The real thief, J. Buncombe, acts as interpreter, and Hector Inch, a young Scotsman, is the prosecutor before Judge Lynch's court The accused is hung, and it is afterwards found out he is innocent His widow learns the names of Buncombe and Inch, and for many years teaches her son to avenge his father. The scene changes to Edinburgh twenty years afterward, and the boy, now Guiseppe Peters, appears, and begins his search for the two men, one of whom is now Lord Justice Inch The patience and determination with which he pursues his vengeance is strongly brought out.

The Vicomte Anne de Keroual de St Ives tells his own story Herded with his fellow-prisoners in Edinburgh Castle, St Ives meets his fate in "la belle Flora," a fair Scotch maiden, who visits the prisoner's market, where little toys and carvings are sold. This is the first chapter of his romance Then follow the perilous escape, the long journey to England, the turn of fortune's wheel whereby the penniless fugitive becomes a man of means, and a rapid sequence of dangers and adventures which find at last a happy ending. The story was left unfinished by Stevenson, and has been completed by Arthur Quiller-Couch ("Q.").

The story opens in the year 1947, on an Atlantic liner just nearing the port of New York. For his hero Mr. Stockton has chosen a brilliant young inventor, Roland Clewe, who has a number of startling schemes under way, among them a plan for the discovery of the North Pole by means of an expedition in a submarine vessel. Just what happens during this expedition is described with a seriousness that gives the adventures a semblance of matters of fact. Through the narrative runs a love interest managed with great skill.

"Du Guesclin was to his country in the fourteenth century what Joan of Arc was in the following century. Sprung from a humble Breton ancestry, with few advantages of position or of early education, he won his way from an obscure position to that of the first citizen of France through the force of his own courage, integrity, prowess, and rare military genius. Beginning his career in the struggle between John de Montfort and Charles de Blois for the succession to the Duchy of Brittany, he later led the Free Companies out of France, banished Peter the Cruel from the throne of Castele, and finally drove the English almost entirely from their extensive possessions in France." —Preface.

The time of the story is 1835-36. A search for the fabulous treasure reputed to have been hidden at the time of the Spanish Inquisition is supposed to be one of the motives which led Bowie and Crockett into the scenes of danger and bloodshed graphically described in a story which likewise gives incidents of Texan history, notably the besieging of the Alamo. The action of Sam Houston and Santa Anna is introduced.

Stoddard, W: Osborn. The red patriot: a story of the American Revolution; il. by B. West Clinedinst. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 4+275 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Covers the time from the 4th of July, 1776, to the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. The heroes are a young boy of New Jersey whose father was in the New Jersey line, and a patriotic Indian. They both do deeds of valor.

Stoddard, W: Osborn. Walled in: a true story of Randall's Island. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1897. c. 4–134 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

A young boy unjustly accused of theft is an inmate of the House of Refuge at Randall's Island, N. Y., when the story opens. He plans an escape for himself and four companions, which is successfully carried out.

Storrs, L: Austin. Koheleth: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., 1897. c. 4+265 p. D. cl., $1.

This story is for the most part located in New London, Conn., in the decadent days of the merchant marine and the whaling service, and is odorous of brine and longshore life. The antithetical characters of Lemuel and Hugh are intended to express the careers of the two sorts of men—one bold, aggressive, confident, successful; the other introspective, doubting, dissatisfied, hesitating to prove and push himself in the battle of the desirable things of life, until by sheer desperation and disappointment he is driven to take issue with his rival.

*Story, Rob. Herbert, D.D. The apostolic ministry in the Scottish church. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 332 p. 12°, (Baird lecture for 1897.) cl., $3.

The hero, Franklin Bell, had always been deeply interested in everything relating to the science of electricity, hence when adversity comes he seeks employment with an electrician in Orange; the difficulties of this first position necessitate his going to Paterson, N. J. His failures and successes here, with many exciting incidents in the career of an ambitious boy, are given.

Stratemeyer, E: Shorthand Tom; or, the exploits of a young reporter. N. Y., W. L. Allison Co., [1897.] 259 p. D. (Bound to win ser., no. 4.) cl., 75 c.

Tom Swift, a shorthand writer, loses his position in the office of a rascally lawyer, who is plotting to get him out of New York City and cheat Tom and his sister out of some property that has been left them. He falls in with a newspaper editor and becomes a reporter. His duties take him to strange places and bring him into contact with dangerous men, who are in the plot to rob him.

Stuart, Esmé. Arrested: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 4+320 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 209.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.
The murder of a rich man, who had defrauded his only sister and his partner's widow of their fortunes, is the central episode. He is on his way to their homes to make restitution when he is knocked down on a lonely moor. A poor young clerk who loves a rich girl, coming into a great deal of money in a mysterious way on the night of the murder, is arrested on suspicion. The girl finds a pocket-book in a strange way, apparently taken from the murdered man's body, which is the means of clearing the clerk. A will found in the pocket-book also shows the clerk is the son of the rich man's sister.

Stuart, Mrs. Ruth McEnery. In Simpkinsville: character tales; il. by Smedley, Carleton, and McNair. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 3+244 p. D. cl., $1.25.
Contents: An Arkansas prophet; Weeds; The unlived life of little Mary Ellen; The dividing-fence; The middle hall; Miss Jemima's Valentine; A slender romance. A series of character sketches among the whites of the south, told largely in dialect.

Stubbs, C: W: (Dean.) Historical memorials of Ely Cathedral: in two lectures delivered in Cambridge in the summer of 1896. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 40+166 p. il. sq. O. cl., $2.50.
The subjects of the two lectures are "The shrine of S Awdrey" and "Alan De Walsingham." They were delivered before popular audiences. Some additions have been made to them in their present form. A chronological table is prefixed to the lectures, of the annals of Ely from the foundation of the monastery to its dissolution. Ample notes follow the lectures.

Stump, Rev. Jos. Life of Philip Melancthon; with an introd. by G. F. Spieker. D.D. Reading, Pa., Pilger Publishing House, 1897. 10+272 p. pors. il. sq. D. cl., $1.25.
In the great Reformation of the sixteenth century the work of Melanchthon stands second to that of Luther alone. Yet his life is comparatively unknown. This biography of him has been prepared in view of the approaching four hundredth anniversary of his birth. The author has made use of a number of biographies of Melanchthon by German authors and other sources of information. He has made a brief and comprehensive account of his career.

Sturgis, Julian Russell. The folly of Pen Harrington: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 2+269 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 221.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.
Pen Harrington, a member of London's fashionable life, having theories on social equality, and a desire to better the condition of the poor, makes the experiments described in the story.

Sturgis, Russell, and Krehbiel, H: E: Annotated bibliography of fine art; ed. with preface by G: Iles, for the American Library Association. Bost., Library Bureau, 1897. c. 2+89 p. O. (American Library Association Annotated Lists.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.
Contents: Pt. 1, Fine art in a general sense, Painting, Sculpture, Engraving, Etching, Illustration, Architecture, Landscape gardening, Minor decorative arts, by Russell Sturgis, president Fine Arts Federation, N. Y. Pt. 2, Music, Histories, Ancient and mediæval music, folk-song and national music, Biography, Wagneriana, Science and Æsthetics, Criticism and Analysis, Encyclopædias, Dictionaries, Journals and Catalogues, by H: E: Krehbiel, musical editor Tribune, N. Y. In all the selection comprises about a thousand works; the notes descriptive and critical incidentally offer suggestive canons of art criticism. Each department has a prefatory note of some length presenting a general view of the subject, with definitions of terms and of leading schools of art. Enlarged five-fold from Part III., of "List of books for girls and women and their clubs," same publishers, 1895.

Sully, Ja. Children's ways: being selections from the author's "Studies of childhood," with some additional matter. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. 8+193 p. il. D. cl., $1 25.

In preparing these selections abstruse discussions have been cut out, technical language dropped as far as possible, and the style adapted to the requirements of the general reader. To shorten the work the last two chapters—"Extracts from a father's diary" and "George Sand's childhood"—have been omitted. The order of treatment has been altered somewhat, and a number of stories has been added.

Swett, Sophie. Tom Pickering of 'Scutney: his experiences and perplexities. Bost., Lothrop Pub. Co., [1897.] c. 282 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A story of a boy and his mates—boys and girls alike—in a country village and by the seashore. Tom is a bright, active, go-ahead fellow. He gains wisdom only by experience and through sundry mishaps and perplexities, most of which are occasioned by his own heedlessness or by differences of opinion between himself and his conscience. Intended for boys and girls of from twelve to sixteen.

Swift, B:. [pseud. for W: R. Paterson.] The tormentor. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 8+271 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"The tormentor" is Jacob Bristol, and the epithet flung at him by the girl whom he has ruined has a special fitness. The only son and heir of a blind father, and one of the most important of the gentry in the twin villages of Great and Little Pines, his cold, analytic nature finds its field in the study of other people's hearts. An investigator of human nature, he calls himself, and before long he becomes the pitiless custodian of the secrets of his townsfolk, wielding a relentless power over his shrinking victims. Appointed guardian of a girl and her brother, he uses his authority in such wise that the girl is ruined and her brother's dearest hopes are crushed.

Swift, Jonathan. The prose works; with a biographical introd. by W. E. H. Lecky. In about 10 v. V. 1, Tale of a tub, the battle of the books, and other early works; with por. and fac-simile. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 91+334 p. 12°, (Bohn's standard lib.) cl., net, $1.

Syms, L. C., ed. Third year in French. N. Y., American Book Co., [1897.] 314 p. D. cl., $1.20.

The two preceding volumes of the French course now completed were on record August 31, 1895, and September 12, 1896. [1231, 1285.] This section contains tables of regular and irregular verbs, with special regard to conditional, subjunctive and infinitive moods, list of idioms, French classic poems for memorizing, taken from the list issued by the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York, as required for their examinations, and many extracts for reading in classes.

T., R., comp. Lessons from life (animal and human): a compendium of moral teachings illustrated by curious and interesting habits, relations, instincts, peculiarities, and ministries of living creatures; with an introd. by Rev. Hugh Macmillan. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1897. 14+527 p. O. cl., $2.50.

A companion volume to "The encyclopædia of nature-teachings." A compilation of anecdotes, descriptions, etc., from well known authors, about the creatures of the air, land, and water. The needs of teachers of children, and even of quiet young children, have been considered by the compiler, some of the illustrations and reflections being quite commonplace. While the prevailing tone is ethical rather than religious, religious truths and Bible texts occupy an important position in the work, and are placed at easy command by carefully prepared indexes.

Taggart, Marion Ames. Aser the shepherd. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1897. c. 3–63 p. il. sq. D. pap., ribbon tied, net, 35 c.

Aser, who tells the story, is the five-year-old son of a shepherd who is in charge of the Temple flocks and is one of those to whom the angel brought the "good tidings of great joy" He is allowed to kiss the hand of the Divine infant and give him his pet lamb. He is with Jesus again at intervals all through his life, and gives the story of his life and a description of the manners and customs of the Jewish people.

Taggart, Marion Ames. Bezaleel. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1897. c. 3–59 p. 1 il. sq. D. pap., ribbon tied, net, 35 c.

"Bezaleel" is the story of the young man who, as we read in St. Matthew, asked our Lord what he should do that he might have life everlasting. The author traces his life from early manhood to the end, introducing, incidentally, many historical personages and describing much that is interesting of the customs of the Jewish people.

Taggart, Marion Ames. The Blissylvania Post-Office. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1897. c. 2–152 p. S. cl., 50 c.

Four children, who were tired of a rainy day in the country, form themselves into a club called The Happy Thought Club, the object of the club being to write letters for amusement. The post-office, which was in an orchard, is named by the only boy in the club. The story tells of the children's methods of conducting their post-office, and gives events in the lives of two honorary members of the H. T. C.

Taggart, Marion Ames. Three girls and especially one. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1897. c. 150 p. S. cl., 50 c.

Marcella, or "Marcy" as she was called, was a little girl of twelve, the eldest of the Merrick children. She was a pretty, gifted child, who is made a cripple for a number of years through a bad fall. The home life henceforth centres about her invalid couch, and her whole character changes. A little cousin from Kansas visits the New York Merricks, and though at first the children laugh at her, they learn to love her dearly. The characters are all Catholics; the story, however, is not sectarian.

Tarver, Francis. French stumbling-blocks and English stepping-stones; to which is added a list of nearly 3000 colloquialisms which cannot be rendered literally from English into French. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. 8+212 p. S. cl., $1.
As Senior French Master at Eton the author practically studied the special difficulties presented to English speaking boys by the French language. He thinks an Englishman only can fully grasp the difficulties of French construction compared with English (such as the definite and partitive articles, the governed pronouns, the gender of nouns and adjectives, the inversion of subject and verb, etc). The book is not a dictionary, much less a grammar, and is intended specially for teachers, to point out to them the points to be untiringly dwelt upon in teaching English-speaking people French.

Taylor, Hobart C. Chatfield. The vice of fools; il. by Raymond M. Crosby. Chic., H. S Stone & Co., 1897. c. 5+310 p. D. cl., $1.50.
In a novel dealing with a social episode of Washington life, pride is considered "the never-failing vice of fools." The characters, including American politicians and members of the foreign legation, are introduced with the heroine, Violet Hunter, who is the daughter of the secretary of war, and the hostess of the evening. Violet, who believes herself in love with one man, is led by her besetting sin, pride, into marrying General Lloyd, prominent in society and affairs of state; following the wedding is a sudden awakening, and the appearance of the real hero. General Lloyd's action at this climax is singular.

Prof. Taylor, of the University of Nebraska, makes in this pamphlet a noteworthy contribution to the current discussion of economic theory He contrasts in a clever fashion the views of older and newer economists on this subject and has shown, it is thought, better than his predecessors the relation between speculation and experience.

Teall, F. Horace. Punctuation; with chapters on hyphenization, capitalization, and spelling. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 6+193 p. S. cl., $1.

An effort to make clear that punctuation depends on grammar and sense and not on rhetorical pauses. The author has reduced the number of actual rules to the fewest possible and devotes himself almost wholly to the principles of punctuation. There is a chapter on Phonetic spelling to which he is wholly opposed, claiming that almost all silent letters serve a logical purpose and were originally adopted for good reason The writer was critical reader on Funk & Wagnalls' "Standard Dictionary."

A picture of school life in Virginia some fifty odd years ago The teacher, who seems to have been a typical schoolmaster of those days, was harsh and tyrannical, and often cruel in his punishments. His injustice to Felicia Grigsby, a bright girl to whom he takes an unreasoning dislike, makes the story With it is given a good sketch of plantation life in slavery days. Written for young people, but full of interest for grown readers.

The story of a self-reliant boy who on an unproductive New England farm makes many ventures, which in the end lead to wealth. Many small adventures give interest to the story, and some acts of boyish heroism carry it to a successful end. The country about Boston is well described, and some of the experiences of country boarders are excellent.

The handbook consists of a statement of the reasons in favor of annexation; a brief description of Hawaii, its people, government, laws, commerce, finances, educational system, and resources; an enumeration of twenty objections that have been made to annexation, and a reply to each, and an exhaustive summary of all the facts relating to the island.

Thwing, C: Franklin, D.D. The American college in American life. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1897. c. 7+313 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The questions considered are: the increasing power of the American college; certain great results obtained from it; its influence over and through individuals; its influence illustrated in the three oldest colleges; certain present conditions; certain adjustments of its ethical and religious forces to its intellectual; the increasing cost of its education; certain difficulties; its power in the future.

Ticknor, Caroline. Miss Belladonna: a child of to-day; il. by L. J. Bridgman. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1897. c. 4+236 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Miss Belladonna is a very precocious little girl who does not hesitate to criticise her father and mother and to frankly express her opinion about matters generally Her views are embraced in the following amusing sketches. Our dog Tramp, A George and Martha Washington party, A candy-pull, Christmas presents and Santa Claus, Aunt Delia and the plumber, A wedding, and A summer on a farm, etc.

This exposition seems to make clear that while the Legal Tender cases would, as prominent precedents, have proved stumbling-blocks in the way of securing a declaration that a silver free coinage bill, which the author believes Congress would have passed if Bryan had been elected, was unconstitutional so far as it applied to existing contracts, still such a declaration might have been confidently expected if the courts had been called to pass upon the question.

The scene is laid in the Bayou Têche country, Louisiana. Yvonne, one of the four daughters of Madame Prévost, who had always been called the man of the family, because of her business ability, believing she sees her way clear to securing a fortune buried in San Domingo by one of her ancestors, puts on male attire, and, acting in accordance with a preconceived plan, has the singular adventures described Tomlinson, Everett T. Exiled from two lands. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1898 [1897.] c. 4-119 p. D. (Hearthstone ser.) cl., 50 c.

The story of a French family who sought a home in Canada at the end of the last century; a series of misunderstandings between the young daughter and her father banishes the former to America. The tragedy of her life is told many years afterward near her grave in the Adirondacks, where a party of "city folks" had made a camp.

Continues the story of the patriotic services of Andrew and David Field, and Elijah and Henry Spicer, now almost grown men. The scene is laid on the great lakes in the year 1814. Some of the incidents are the expedition to Oswego, the attack on the fort there by the fleet of Sir James Yeo, the capture of one of the nineteen boats which left that place with supplies, the fight on Sandy Creek, the capture of the Black Snake, etc.

Tomlinson, Everett T. Washington's young aids: a story of the New Jersey campaign, 1776-1777; il. by C: Copeland. Bost., W. A. Wilde & Co., [1897.] c. 3+391 p. sq. D. (War of the Revolution ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.50.

Two of the young men of this story were the heroes of the former volumes of the series, viz., "Three colonial boys" and "Three young Continentals." The place of their former companion and friend, Evart Van Slyke, who fell in the battle of Long Island, is, in a measure, replaced by a New Jersey boy named Jonas Baker. The historical details of the story are taken from old records. These include accounts of the life on the prison-ships and in the prison-houses of New York, the raids of the pine robbers, the tempting of the Hessians, the end of Fagan and his band etc.

Tompkins, Arnold. The science of discourse: a rhetoric for high schools and colleges. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1897. c. '89, '97. 14+353 p. D. cl., $1.10.

Based on a former publication by the author under the same title. The former treatment was dominated by a pedagogical motive, which, for the present purpose, required so complete a rewriting that this work can scarcely be called a revision of the former. The spirit of scientific co-ordination, however, which prompted the old is the ruling spirit in the new.

New Haven, Ct, The Our Race Publishing Co., 1897. c. '82-'92. 25+309 p. il. D. (Our race ser., no. 18.) cl., $1.50.

A revision of a study first published in 1882, the centennial year of the adoption of the Great Seal of the United States. Volume I. of the revision forms Study No. 18 of Our Race Series, and vol. II., with sub-title "Its significance," will be an independent discussion of the symbology involved in the design of the seal. Like all the publications of this society it is a study in mysticism and correspondencies, but full of thought on what America should stand for in the eyes of her citizens and the eyes of the world

Townsend, Luther Tracy, D.D. The story of Jonah in the light of higher criticism. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1897. c. 2-119 p. S. cl., 50 c.

Ten years ago a discussion on the book of Jonah led the author to an investigation of the subject. His conclusions he embodied in a sermon preached in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, May 29, 1887. Having made earnest search for all available additional information, he has now printed another sermon which he preached in the Methodist church, Washington, D. C. He proves the integrity of the Scripture narrative according to generally accepted premises and outlines some methods to be employed in future in answering "higher critics." At one point, however, he concedes divine interposition.

Tracy, L: An American Emperor: the story of the Fourth Empire of France. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons. 1897. c. 6-424 p. il. D. cl., $1.75.

The author of "The final war" has again written a most ingenious story, showing intimate knowledge of the politics of France and the national characteristics of many lands. The American emperor is a New York millionaire. He meets a daughter of the Bourbon kings, who refuses to marry him unless he can put her on the throne of France. Untold wealth, marvellous business capacity, and knowledge of the desires of Frenchmen enable him to conquer the republic and make the French acknowledge him emperor with acclamation. Then his heart redeems his head and the end is a surprise.

Traice, Eliz. C. Wee doggie. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1898 [1897.] 6-128 p. il. D. cl., 50 c.

While a helpless puppy the "Wee doggie" in the story was thrown over Mr. Weston's garden wall in Hampstead, England. Mr. Weston rescued him from hunger and cold, and gave him to his little boy for a pet. For a while he is in clover, then he gets lost, and figures in a number of adventures, finally rescuing his first young master from drowning.

Murray Van Vorst, who had been a prominent figure in New York society life, was arrested for felony at the instance of his father-in-law. The interesting incidents of his story occur after he has served ten years' imprisonment and has returned to re-establish his place in society. He then meets his daughter, and with her help and that of Charlotte Pendexter it is proven that Van Vorst's wife was the criminal for whom he had suffered; following this revelation is the surprising event of the novel.

Train, Eliz. Phipps. A queen of hearts. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1898 [1897.] c. 2+280 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The queen of hearts begins her story in diary form on the wedding-day of her daughter, when thirty-seven years of her own chequered life came to a close. Her father was an actor, her mother the daughter of a clergyman holding all theatricals, all joy and gladness, in abhorrence. The writer tells how she escaped from this tyranny, danced herself into a competency, brought up her daughter in ignorance of her mother's profession, and finally gave up her own chance of a happy home with a man who loved her—all for the love she bore her once deserted child.

Trask, Katrina, [Mrs. Spencer Trask.] John Leighton, jr.: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1898 [1897.] c. 3+252 p. D. cl., $1.25.

John Leighton, Sr., was a strong Calvinist, and brought up his motherless boy with cruel sternness. When John Leighton, Jr, returned from the study of international law in Germany he was forced to admit that he did not share his father's form of faith, and he was put out of the home at once. The scene is New York City. John's love history is written to illustrate the author's theory that love, marriage, divorce, the rights of men and women, the questions of sex, etc., are legitimate subjects of fiction, but that they should always be so handled as to inspire virtue. Incidentally many excellent criticisms of music, painting, literature, and the culture of the day are interwoven.

"The Golden Crocodile" is a gold-mine in the western country beyond the Rockies; its fortunes are varied as are those of its owners. The interest centres in a young Englishman who believes one night he witnesses the lynching of a companion, and carries with him for years a sense of guilt of having been a party to the murder. In the end the man is found alive. Morman life is introduced, and there is a love affair, and scenes of various kinds from western mining life.

Trine, Ralph Waldo. In tune with the infinite; or, fulness of peace, power, and plenty. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1897.] c. 2–222 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In general terms may be described as a treatise upon optimism and pessimism. As one follows one or the other of these systems of thought it determined whether the life shall be one of power or of impotence, of peace or pain, of success or of failure. Man makes his own heaven or his own hell. Heaven means harmony; hell in its old English meaning is to build a wall around, to separate. The book deals with the power of the interior forces in moulding the every-day conditions of life.

Amy Langton, a young English girl, becomes an M D in spite of the opposition of all her family, her brothers refusing to meet her during the time she is studying. She is an advocate of female suffrage, and believes professional women should remain single. Her theories are severely tested by a young man, who is so good and beautiful that he is called the "Immaculate" all through the story. His ideal is the dependent and clinging woman, but Miss Langton impresses him so strongly that he proposes to her three times.

The author is professor of the history and philosophy of religion and of Christian ethics in Cornell University He sees cheering indications of a concordat between theology and anthropology. He has given simply a résumé of the conclusions of modern thought in metaphysics, speculative ontology, and religious philosophy. He deduces from science and history that mankind has been urged along the track of progress by moral and religious ideals. These demand a Supreme Cause and End—a God and an immortal life.

"The plan of the author has been to let both parties in the controversy—the Whigs and the Tories, the Revolutionists and the Loyalists—tell their own story freely in their own way, and without either of them being liable, at our hands, to posthumous outrage in the shape of partisan imputations on their sincerity, their magnanimity, their patriotism, or their courage. . . . The entire body of American writings, from 1763 to 1783, whether serious or mirthful, in prose or in verse, is here delineated in its most characteristic examples, for the purpose of exhibiting the several stages of thought and emotion through which the American people passed during the two decades of the struggle which resulted in our national independence."—Preface "The chief aim of the first volume is to trace the development of political discontent in the Anglo-American colonies from about the year 1760 until the year of the resolve of American Independence: the aim of the second volume is to trace the development of the Revolutionary struggle under the altered conditions produced by this change in its object and in its character, and to go on with the tale until the year when American Independence was formally acknowledged by the British government."

Tyner, Paul. Through the invisible: a love-story; il. by Ella F. Pell. N. Y., The Continental Publishing Co., [1897.] c. 10–196 p. nar. S. cl., 75 c.

The keynote of the novel is given in a quotation from Omar Khayyám, "I sent my soul through the invisible, some letters of that after life to spell." The hero, a young but blasé man, meets in Paris a beautiful American girl, whom he recognizes as his affinity. While desiring to elevate himself to the spiritual level of the heroine by reincarnation, he is temporarily transported to another sphere, and the mystical teachings of Theosophy are manifested.

Ufford, Walter Shepard. Fresh air charity in the United States. N. Y., Bonnell, Silver & Co., [1897.] 4+114 p. O. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A plea for co-operation in the work of Fresh Air relief. A gathering of statistics from the 129 societies so planned as to answer the following questions: Is the money wisely spent? Are Fresh Air funds economically administered? How far will a dollar go in this work? What is its influence upon its recipient? Does the shadow which haunts every other form of charitable endeavor, also lurk here—that of pauperizing those helped? The author was recently Fellow in Sociology in Columbia University.

A sort of prose poem; the author begins with a glowing description of the beauties of the sea, and the charm of the white sails, etc., but he quickly turns it into a parable, and asks his readers the question. "Whither bound?" He pictures the haven of work and the haven of character, and shows how the "last port" is free to us all—according as our desires are pointed.

Van Dyke, H: Jackson, jr. The builders, and other poems. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 6+87 p. D. cl., $1.50

The volume takes its title from an academic ode—"The builders"—recited at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Princeton College, Oct 21, 1896. The short poems are grouped as "Songs out of doors," "Four birds and a flower," and "Lyrics of friendship and faith."

Van Dyke, H: Jackson, jr. The first Christmas tree: il. by Howard Pyle. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 4+76 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The triumph of the gospel of peace over the rude savagery of heathenism is most poetically described in this strong and charming story of how the first Christmas tree was substituted for the gloomy oak of Geismar, at whose foot human sacrifices were offered by the German barbarians until dramatically interrupted by the Wessex monk Winfried. The text is enclosed in emblematical borders, and there are many full-page pictures.

The aim of this work is to give as graphic a view as possible of a single act in the great life-drama of humanity. This act was the crisis of the Papal church in that period of intellectual and social reconstruction called the age of the renascence, which transformed the mediæval into the modern world. The scene opens with the return of the Pope from Avignon to Rome in 1377. It closes with the sack of Rome by the Spanish-German army, under the Duc de Bourbon, in 1527.

Four short stories. The one that gives the title to the collection—"One man who was content"—is a psychological study; it preaches the gospel of contentment along the largest, noblest lines, for the hero of the tale gives as the source of his happiness the sense that he has really lived the life of a man. "The Lustigs" and "Corinna's Fiammetta" are based upon life in the poorer quarters of a great city.

In "The Crown Prince of Rexania," the first of the two stories embraced under the title, Prince Carlo is the monarch and hero. He comes to America incognito, and in New York City falls into the hands of four conspirators from his native land; his history thereafter is interesting. Rexania is evidently a fictitious name for some European kingdom. King Rudolph II. of Hesse Heilfels, another fictitious kingdom, is the king of the second story, called "A Princess of the Rhine."

This work was published last year in a sumptuous édition de luxe. It is now offered at a lower price and in more modest form. No annotated English edition of Vasari's "Lives" has appeared since the year 1850. This in itself is excuse enough for the present work. Rather than limit the number of notes, the editors of the present edition have preferred to choose among biographies, believing that a relatively complete annotation of the more important "Lives" was desirable.

Veysey, Arthur H: A cheque for three thousand. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., 1897. c. 3–218 p. D. cl., $1.

An eccentric millionaire and philanthropist, wearied of systematic giving to charitable institutions, determines to indulge a whim of going on a spree by proxy He finds an interesting young man in a cheap restaurant, and conveys to him a cheque of three thousand dollars, with one stipulation only, that the young man, at the end of twelve months, is to report in person how he has spent the money. The hero spends three months in Paris, in which time he succeeds in ruining himself; he returns to America, resumes his former work, and writes a successful play on his own adventures.

Ramuntcho was the illegitimate son of a Basque peasant girl, who angered her family and friends when she eloped with a man of social rank. Repenting for her sin Franchita, the mother of Ramuntcho, returned to Etchegar, her native parish, and by living a life of austerity regained, with one exception, the respect of her old neighbors; this enemy plots against mother and son, and eventually brings about the sad renunciation which ends the story.

Vivekânanda, (Swâmi.) Vedânta philosophy: lectures by the Swâmi Vivekânanda on Râja Yoga and other subjects. [Also] Patanjali's Yoga aphorisms, with commentaries and glossary of Sanskrit terms. N. Y., H. J. Van Haagen, 1897. 7+376 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Râja Yoga is an ancient system of Indian philosophy, and one of the four chief methods that the Vedânta philosophy offers to obtain freedom and perfection. These methods are Karma Yoga, work, action; Bhakti Yoga, love, devotion; Jnâna Yoga, philosophy; and Râja Yoga, psychic control, controlling the mind, senses, etc. It is of the latter that this book mostly treats. Swâmi Vivekânanda was the representative of the Hindu religion at the World's Parliament of Religion, held in Chicago, 1893, and has since become widely known as a lecturer. His teachings are universal in their application.

The author of "The romance of an empress" has vitalized the figure of Peter the Great with the same force as that he brought to the recreation of Catharine the Second of Russia. Sparing neither his vices nor his weaknesses, he leaves him still a great man—the force that made Russia what it is to-day. The book is divided into parts devoted to "His education," "The man," and "His work." We learn of the scandals of his life—his mistresses, his excesses of all sorts, and also of his marriage, his favorites and associates, his wars and campaigns, his reforms, his diplomacy, etc.

A little town in Louisiana was the home of Mrs. Cook and her three young daughters; when the story opens Colonel Cook, the father of the family, has just died, and the mother and daughters were selling their furniture and moving into cheaper quarters. The story illustrates the development of the three girls' characters, who become helpful and self-reliant under the strain of great poverty. A desk belonging to their father, that he had told them always to keep, but which slips from them for a while and goes through different hands, finally returns to their possession and brings fortune with it.

Continues the story of the little home near East Gloucester, that Miss Phelps built before her marriage, and which was the subject of "An old maid's Paradise" and "Burglars in Paradise." Miss Phelps's husband takes up the story and tells in an amusing way how "Paradise" was moved across the river. He no doubt was the "widower" of the former stories who captured the charming "old maid"; his book having an evident semi-biographical quality.

Waterloo, Stanley. The story of Ab: a tale of the time of the cave men. Chic., Way & Williams, 1897. c. 6+351 p. map, D. cl., $1.50.
The author's imagination, fired by accurate scientific study, has conjured up a picture of the life of prehistoric man with his elemental wants and passions, his gradual discoveries of means to provide better for the protection and sustenance of his family. The fundamental unchangeableness of human nature is the thought carried through the realistic and poetic tale. Evolution is the keynote. The strong, fearless descendants of Ab, the cave man, have handed down the qualities that always live in all strong, good women, and in such men as Abraham Lincoln, William E. Gladstone, Victor Hugo, Bismarck, etc.—the people that move and advance the world

Watson, Mrs. Augusta Campbell. Beyond the city gates: a romance of old New York. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1897. c. 4+324 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.50.
The story opens in old New York about the year 1700; Freida Van Dycke, the daughter of a wealthy farmer, is loved by two men, viz., Adriaen de Witte, the nephew of the Patroon, and Morris Van Cortlandt, the son of a wealthy tea merchant. She has given her love to Adriaen against the wishes of her family and in opposition to the Patroon, who desires a bride higher in the social scale for his nephew. Captain Kidd figures in the story, it being at last discovered that young Adriaen and the Patroon had been giving information to the famous pirate.

The present work has grown out of lectures recently delivered before the Philosophical Union of the University of California. Pt. 1 is the expansion of a lecture on "The Greek and Christian ideals of life," and the remainder contains the substance of two lectures in defence of idealism with a good deal of additional matter. Though the first to come from the press, this volume is in its proper order the second in a series of publications projected by the Philosophical Union of the University of California. The first volume, "The conception of God," by Prof. Royce, will shortly be issued.

Watson, Rev. J: Christianity and idealism: the Christian ideal of life in its relations to the Greek and Jewish ideals and to modern philosophy. New ed., with additions. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. '96. 39+292 p. D. cl., $1.75.

The present edition has been enlarged by the addition of three chapters, viz: "The failure of materialism," "The idealistic interpretation of natural evolution," and "Idealism and human progress." The last chapter, "Idealism and Christianity," has been greatly enlarged.

An essay on home, showing the elements which combine to make that hallowed spot the nursery of human life.

Watson, J: Maclaren, D.D., ["Ian Maclaren," pseud.] The Ian Maclaren year-book. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. '94–'97. unp. por. D. cl., $1.25.

A selection for each day of the year from the Rev. John Watson's writings, made under his own supervision.

Watson, J: Maclaren, D.D., ["Ian Maclaren," pseud.] Ideals of strength; with a sketch of his life. N. Y., Wilbur B. Ketcham, [1897.] c. 76 p. nar. D. cl., 50 c.

Comprises two homilies: the first, "The folly of stifling religious convictions," a persuasive talk based on Paul's Warning to the Thessalonians, "Quench not the spirit"; the second, "The deceitfulness of sin," holds forth unquestionable truths, illustrated by bright similes and examples, and is a clear and strong argument. There is also a sketch of the author's life.

Watson, J: Maclaren, D.D., ["Ian Maclaren," pseud.] The potter's wheel. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. '95–'97. 5+209 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Short papers on: The potter's wheel: Departures in life; Broken homes; Loss of goods; Trials of faith; Missing the prize of life; Vexatious children; Obscurity; Vanishing illusions; The defeats of the soul; The veiling of the soul; Perplexing providences; The world-sorrow; The problem of personal suffering; Death; Our departed.

Watson, Kathleen. Litanies of life. 2d ed. N. Y., M. F. Mansfield, [Agt. for Ja. Bowden,] 1897. 5–168 p. D. cl., $1.

Five short stories, or life histories of women, reflecting the joys and sorrows felt by some of the votaries of human love. The sketches are entitled: In an attic; Under the lilacs; On the eve of departure; Off Arran's Isle; In exile.

*Watson, Rosamund Marriott. The art of the house; supplemented by many il. from the loan collection at Bethnal Green, the South Kensington Museum, and elsewhere. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 12+185 p. 8°, cl., net, $2.

Watson, W: The year of shame: with an introd. by the Bishop of Hereford. N. Y., J. Lane, 1897. 3–74 p. 1 il. S. cl., $1.

Twenty-three sonnets and three other poems. Though they all have a certain chronological sequence in point of subject-matter and occasion, they are not otherwise meant to be understood as a series. The sonnets deal with the Armenian atrocities and England's desertion of the Armenians. Sixteen of the sonnets are reprinted, in some cases with alterations, from the author's pamphlet, "The purple east." The remaining pieces have not appeared before, except in newspapers.

*Watt, W. A. The theory of contract in its social light. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 96 p. 8°, cl., $1.25.

Watts, I:, D.D. Childhood's songs of long ago; with picturings by Blanche McManus. N. Y., E. R. Herrick & Co., 1897. c. 4–87 p. O. cl., $1.25.

Twenty full-page pictures, extremely quaint and characteristic, illustrate as many of Dr Watts' divine and moral songs, which were familiar to the young people of past generations. Introduced by a brief account of the life of Isaac Watts, D D

Watts, W: Courtney. Chronicles of a Kentucky settlement. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1897. c. 13+490 p. O. cl., $2.

In the form of a story, and under fictitious names, the writer gives an interesting record of the lives of the early citizens of Salem, Livingston County, Kentucky. The romance in the lives of these pioneers and also the hardships are illustrated with many pathetic and humorous episodes.

Weare, G. E. Cabot's discovery of North America. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. 10+343 p. pors. il. maps, O. cl., $3.50.

Begins with a short summary of the history of navigation. The author has consulted everything known on his subject, and the book, even if it offered nothing new, would be valuable as bringing together the various statements of explorers and historians in excellent shape for reference. Good index.

Webster, Leigh. Rich enough; il. by Eliz. S. Pitman. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1897. c. 242 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The Kent family of Boston might have been comfortable enough, and their father free from constant anxiety, if they had not been so extravagant. Marian, the eldest daughter, suddenly realizes her father's struggle to give them all they desire, and makes an effort to stop some of the outgo. Her plan is that they give up the city house and return to the old homestead. A fire helps her in her plans, and the others are only too ready to leave the wet, smoky house. The change of environment helps all around: the boys become more industrious and thoughtful, and the girls find their first real happiness in the homely old house.

Webster, W: Clarence. A comparative study of the state constitutions of the American Revolution. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1897.] 1+64-104 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 200.) pap., 35 c.

One of the most valuable of recent contributions to our early history. From it a very clear conception can be obtained of the political conditions and form of government preceding and during the Revolution.

Webster, W: Clarence. Recent centralizing tendencies in state educational administration. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 4-78 p. O. (Columbia University studies in history, economics, and public law, v. 8, no. 2.) pap., 75 c.

Weed, Clarence Moores. Life histories of American insects. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. 11+272 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The life histories of a few of the most interesting American insects are discussed in a non-technical manner. Many of them are species or groups of species that the writer has especially studied during the last ten years. Some of the titles of the twenty-six papers are: A family of water-kings; The toothed-horned fish-fly; Tiger-beetles and their larvæ; The click-beetles; The black crickets; The moulting of a grasshopper; The oak-leaf miner; Sand-wasps and their victims, etc.

Weed, Clarence Moores. Stories of insect life. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1897. c. 4+54 p. il. sq. D. bds., 30 c.

The insects treated of are the more interesting common forms of spring and early summer; the story of the life of each is told in a simple way, rendering the book especially desirable for children to read in connection with nature studies of insects; it is designed to give information to the child regarding the lives of the insects, and to stimulate pupils to fuller observation of insects out-of-doors. The species treated of include the tent caterpillar, cabbage worm, antiopa butterfly, yellow butterfly, ant lion, May beetle, lacewing fly, flower spider, and various other common forms.

Wesselhoeft, Lily Foster. Torpeanuts the tomboy: a story for children. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1897. c. 5–296 p. il. sq. D. cl., $1.25.

"Torpeanuts," of course, was not a real name. It was bestowed upon a little girl by some boys who tried to frighten her with a torpedo, which she called "torpeanuts"—consequently the name stuck to her ever afterwards. She was a wild, ignorant little thing, extremely fond of animals, and was all the time bringing home sick or wounded or aged specimens and caring for them. There is another little girl in the story, who only comes to live in the country in her seventh year, who also learns to love animals. The rats and cats and horses all talk among themselves, as in other of Miss Wesselhoeft's books.

Wharton, Anne Hollingsworth. Martha Washington. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. 14+306 p. por. D. (Women of Colonial and Revolutionary times, no. 5.) buckram, $1.25.

"The story of Martha Washington's life has not been an easy one to tell, so largely has she, as a distinct personality, been overshadowed by the greater importance of the figure that has stood beside her. . . . Hence, in writing of Mrs. Washington, except during the early years of her life in Williamsburg, the author has unconsciously drawn the picture of husband and wife together as they appeared to her mind. By this means have come to us some glimpses of Washington as husband, host, and country gentleman. . . ." —Preface.

Wharton, Edith, and Codman, Ogden, jr. The decoration of houses. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1897. c. 22+204 p. il. O. bds., $4.

Specially emphasizes the fact that house decoration should be considered as a branch of architecture, and not left to the upholsterer, who piles a mass of heterogeneous things together, regardless of the general composition of the architect and limited only by the purse of the house-owner. Fifty-six illustrations, all from places open to the public throughout the world. Bibliography of books consulted (6 p.). Bound in boards covered with wall-paper of bold design.

Wharton, T: "Bobbo," and other fancies; with an introd. by Owen Wister. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 27+182 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Contains four stories and a number of verses "Bobbo" is a fanciful story of a dream had by Paul Patureau, clerk of a magistrate's court in Paris. "The last sonnet of Prinzivalle di Cembino," has for its theme the purity of the love of the hero for Madonna Ghita, the wife of Ugo degli Carrecci: "Ratu Tanito's wooing" is a tale of the south seas; the other story is called "Old and New" and has its scene at Bar Harbor. A number of verses are included in the volume.

Whitehouse, H. Remsen. The sacrifice of a throne: being an account of the life of Amadeus, Duke of Aosta, sometime King of Spain. N. Y. Bonnell, Silver & Co., 1897. c. 2–328 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

Step by step the reader accompanies the hero of this historical sketch, prepared from materials not within the reach of the general public, from the hour of his birth, as a member of one of the most ancient reigning houses of Europe, to his acceptance and renunciation of the Spanish crown. Briefly outlining the events which led up to the unification of Italy, the writer points out their influence in the formation of the character of the Italian prince, and their bearing on the political and social trials which made a further tenancy of the Spanish throne anomalous. The description of the first Cuban rebellion, the attempted emancipation of the slaves, and the proposed political and municipal reforms help to a better understanding of the social condition of that unhappy island.

Whitman, Walt. Calamus: a series of letters written during the years 1868–1880, by Walt Whitman to a young friend (Peter Doyle); ed. with an introd. by R: Maurice Bucke, M.D., one of Whitman's literary executors. Bost., Laurens Maynard, [Small, Maynard & Co.] 1897. c. 8–173 p. pors. facsimiles, D. cl., net, $1.

These letters have an especial significance as recording one of the closest of Whitman's friendships with the common people, which were so characteristic of the poet. The book is entitled "Calamus" from the section of "Leaves of grass" dealing with "the manly love of comrades." Besides the letters, of which there are over one hundred, there is a complete table of chronological notes of Whitman's life, and an introduction by the editor, including a full account of a recent interview with Mr. Doyle.

Whittick, W: A. Value and an invariable unit of value: an important discovery in economics. Phil., [W: A. Whittick,] 1897. c. '96. 3–132 p. il. O. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

An analysis of value, in which the author aims to reach a scientific basis for a just money system. He claims that "after study and investigation, more or less intense, for over twenty years he has discovered an invariable unit of value, and that the discovery is so simple yet perfect a solution of the vexing money question that the reader, when he once grasps the argument, will wonder that the savants—the political economists, professors and teachers—have, without exception, asserted the impossibility, yea, the inconceivability of an invariable unit of value."

Wilkins, Frances. A microscopic hypnotist. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., 1897. c. 5–204 p. D. (Dillingham's American authors lib., no. 26.) pap., 50 c.

A story of English life. Mr. William Latimer, illegitimate son of an M. P. and an Italian model, is the principal character. He had inherited from his mother a marvellous hypnotic power and a tendency to use this power for evil With the best of motives, and an earnest desire to use his strange gift for good, he became a minister; curate of Rosebriar Parish Here he met his Nemesis in the person of Lady Kildare, a woman of questionable age and antecedents.

Wilkins, Mary Eleanor. Jerome, a poor man: a novel; il. by A. I. Keller. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. 6+506 p. S. cl., $1.50.

When Jerome Edwards was only twelve years of age his father disappeared, and it was supposed he had committed suicide. Jerome at once went to work to support his mother and sister, and it is with the development of his character, under circumstances involving no ordinary self-sacrifice, that the story has to do. From an extremely sensitive boy he became a strong and somewhat narrow-minded man. His love for the rich squire's daughter plays a large part in his life The story is of the New England of some forty years ago.

Wilkinson, W: Cleaver, D.D. The epic of Paul. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1897. c. 2–722 p. O. cl., $2.

The sequel to "The epic of Saul" The action begins with that conspiracy formed at Jerusalem against the life of the apostle, which in the sequel led to a prolonged suspension of his free missionary career. It embraces the incidents of his removal from Jerusalem to Cæsarea, of his imprisonment at the latter place, of his journey to Rome for trial before Cæsar, and of his final martyrdom The design of the poem as a whole is to present through conduct on Paul's part and through speech from him, a living portrait of the man that he was, together with a reflex of his most central and most characteristic teaching.

This study is the first part of a projected introduction to the social statistics of the United States. It will be followed shortly by another on the density and distribution of their population. Both studies are the outcome of lectures on social statistics offered to university undergraduates, and are published primarily for their convenience, but may be suggestive to others engaged in teaching or studying the subject.

Willey, Freeman Otis. The laborer and the capitalist. N. Y., Equitable Publishing Co., [1897.] c. '96. 10+310 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

An attempt to state the position of the laborer and that of the capitalist with equal clearness, and to present the arguments for and against both, without catering to either. The book dwells specially upon the mutual relations which grow out of present conditions throughout the world. The author thinks the chief difficulty lies in the ignorance of the workingman about economic questions. He points out upon what basis the laboring people and the wealthier classes should consider and discuss the pressing issues between them.

Williams, F: Benton, [pseud for Herbert E. Hamblen.] On many seas: the life and exploits of a Yankee sailor; ed. by his friend, W: Stone Booth. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. c. '96. 10+417 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The writer was born at Lovell, Maine, and ran away to sea when a boy. He never had any literary training and only a public school education, but he seems to have been one of the born story-tellers, his work being forcible and dramatic. It relates his own adventures during fifteen years at sea on merchant ships, and depicts with unique raciness and humor and truthfulness a phase of sea life almost extinct. While he styles himself Fred B. Williams, his real name is Herbert E. Hamblen. He attracted the attention of Mr. W. S. Booth, librarian of the Webster Free Library, of the East Side House Settlement in New York, as a constant borrower of books, and it was through his advice that he wrote out his life.

Williams, Ralph Olmsted. Some questions of good English examined in controversies with Dr. Fitzedward Hall. N. Y., H: Holt & Co.. 1897. c. 8+233 p. O. cl., $1.75.

Originating in a pleasantry, the discussions republished in this volume soon took a serious turn. Most of the papers are reprinted from The Dial and from Modern Language Notes of the past five years. The correct literary usage of many idioms is discussed most interestingly, such as "Known to" and "unknown to," "None but they," "Is being built," "Born in Boston," "To part from" and "to part with," "Every and each," etc. Examples from leading authors are freely quoted.

Mr Williams shows that the relative value of gold and silver has exhibited in China the same steady and regular depreciation of silver as measured in gold, as in the western world, with the difference that the change from 4 of silver to 1 of gold, to 15 and then to 30 of silver to 1 of gold, which has taken thirty centuries in the west, has taken but five in China.

That most of the things we have been taught to consider right and desirable—in the laws, in morals, in religion and government—are not only opposed to the highest development of the individual, and detrimental to his happiness and welfare, but positively wrong, are the arguments of the author. His aim is to teach self-reliance, by making people think for themselves. His suggestions for living are simple and seemingly practical, though really rather visionary. The book is fresh and amusing, if not altogether helpful. A list of books that have helped the author covers four pages.

Wilson, Ja. Grant. General Grant. N. Y., Appleton, 1897. c. 7+390 p. il. por. D. (Great commanders ser.) cl., $1.50.

General Wilson made General Grant's acquaintance at Cairo, Ill., in the summer of 1861, and served under him at Vicksburg and elsewhere, and continued the always pleasant intercourse with him for a period of a quarter of a century. He has endeavored to describe him with candor and fidelity, stating facts only on what appeared to be good authority, and avoiding all exaggeration. The volume includes a series of letters sent by Grant to his faithful friend, the Hon E S Washburne, which are of great historical value. There are also communications of great interest from Grant's surviving classmates of the U. S. Military Academy.

Windsor, W: Loma: a citizen of Venus. St. Paul, Minn., The Windsor & Lewis Publishing Co., 1897. c. 10+429 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

Loma, the citizen of the planet Venus, who is the chief speaker in this story, comes to Chicago through a series of unexpected events, and finds himself an inmate of the house of Dr. Bell, and his mother, too highly cultured, broad-minded people. In a number of conversations Loma gives utterance to some new and strange views about astronomy, electricity, and magnetism, and about the relations of the sexes as taught in the planet Venus. The author's interpretation of Jesus's birth and many of his sayings, and his condemnation of orthodox Christianity are startling.

Wines, Rev. F: Howard, and Koren, J: The liquor problem in its legislative aspects: an investigation made under the direction of C: W. Eliot, Seth Low, and Ja. C. Carter. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 7+342 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A committee of fifty prominent men, representing all the professions and almost every dignified calling in life, several years ago organized themselves into a body to investigate the liquor problem. They expended more than $6000 in making a direct first hand investigation, by trained experts, of the workings of prohibitory and license laws of various kinds in Maine, Iowa, South Carolina, Massachusetts, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, and Missouri. Definite local information is set down as obtained in each of these states. This investigation extended over two years of work, and it includes the result of almost every kind of experiment that has been made to restrict or to prohibit the traffic

Winsor, Justin. The westward movement, the colonies and the republic west of the Alleghanies, 1763–1798; with full cartographical il. from contemporary sources. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1897. c. 8+595 p. pors. maps, O. cl, $4.

Completes the story begun by Dr. Winsor in "Cartier to Frontenac" (1534–1700), and continued in "The Mississippi basin" (1697–1763), illustrating American history in its geographical relations from the time of Columbus to the beginning of this century. The proclamation of George III., which had followed the treaty of Paris in 1763, was a taunt hurled at the new American spirit. It provoked the struggle of the western pioneers beyond the Alleghanies, which soon made them match the heroism of their brothers on the seaboard in the war for independence.

Winworth, Freda. The epic of sounds: an elementary interpretation of Wagner's "Nibelungen ring." Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1897. 44+185 p. S. cl., $1.25.

Intended for readers of all ages. Relates the stories of the Wagner dramas in narrative form, "using only the dialogue and scenic descriptions of Wagner," and treating the matter "as a poetical whole." As some slight guidance through the musical part of the drama, the writer describes in the text the guiding themes, or what are generally known as "motives." The piano score of the "motives" is given at the end of the book An effective arrangement of type impresses the various characters on the student's mind. An analytical introduction embraces a sketch of the larger outlines of the whole drama, and shows the various relations and significance of persons and things.

The first volume of the Heart of nature series which derives its title from the old man who plays such a delightful part in Miss Wright's "Story of Tommy Anne and the three hearts." The scene is the orchard farm, the time from spring to autumn, the characters are Dr. Roy Hunter, a naturalist, Olive, the doctor's daughter, Nat and Dodo, his nephew and niece, Rap, a country boy, Mammy Bun, an old colored nurse, and Olaf, an old fisherman. Everything to be known about birds is taught by Dr. Hunter by conversations according to the inductive method. The joint author's name is guarantee of accuracy, and Miss Wright has the genius of pleasing children.

Wright, Margaret B. Hired furnished: being certain economical housekeeping adventures in England. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1897. c. 9+455 p. map, S. cl., $1.25.

A record of a visit made to England by Mrs. Wright and her son, and of their sojourn in various interesting rural suburbs of cities and towns in cottages and villas, "hired furnished"; their plan has much to recommend it in the way of economy and absence of trouble, and was attended by many fresh and interesting adventures. The sights they saw are also graphically described.

Desiring to know from personal observation the condition of the working poor, Professor Wyckoff, now lecturer on sociology in Princeton University, started out six years ago to earn his living by manual labor. He carried no money with him, and had to make his life conform to what he earned. In successive chapters he relates his interesting experience as a day-laborer at West Point, as a hotel porter, as a hired man at an asylum, as a farm hand and in a logging camp. These papers are greatly expanded since they appeared in Scribner's Magazine.

Wyllarde, Dolf. A lonely little lady. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. c. 8+183 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The "lonely little lady" is a quaint child of eight years, who is only a plaything for her fashionable, frivolous mother, and who has been drilled into the ways of the world long before she has outgrown childhood. She lives without love or sympathy, excepting that she receives from a big cat, in a great house full of servants and relatives. Incidentally she and her father, a sad, overworked man, whom nobody seems to notice, learn to know and love each other, and she is made to witness her mother's flirtations with a former lover, with whom she elopes finally, leaving her child and her father to console each other.

X., G. E. The chatelaine. Buffalo, N. Y., Peter Paul Book Co., 1897. c. 4-211 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"The chatelaine" is made up of various articles on various subjects. Much philosophy and symbolism is contained between the covers of this little volume, but whatever the subject—philosophy, love, travel—it is pervaded with a sentiment sincere, simple, and poetic, and for expression takes often to verse, original or most happily adapted quotation.

Xenophon. The cyropædia of Xenophon; abridged for schools by C. W. Gleason. N. Y., American Book Co., [1897.] c. 325 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The aim is to offer an abridged edition of the Cyropædia of Xenophon, which may alternate with, or perhaps in many cases be substituted for, the Anabasis—too frequently the only book read in second-year work in Greek. The book has been shortened nearly one-half by the omission of passages of minor interest and importance.

Xenos, Stephanos Theodoros. Andronike: the heroine of the Greek Revolution; from the original Greek, by Edwin A. Grosvenor. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1897. c. 12+527 p. O. cl., $1.50.

"This book is a romance of love and adventure, with its scene laid in Greece. Though Andronike, the heroine, Thrasyboulos, her lover, and the renegade Barthakas are actors in the Greek revolution of 1821, they might be reckoned characters of to-day. That revolution, with its mingled heroism and shame, does not differ greatly from this last war, itself an episode in the ceaseless struggle between the Christian and the Mussulman, the Greek and the Turk. This story is a succession of instantaneous photographs, revealing, with photographic accuracy, phases of life in the Balkan peninsula."—From Prof. Grosvenor's Preface.

Yeats, S. Levett. The Chevalier d'Auriac. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1897. 8+323 p. D. cl., $1.25.

France in the days of Henry IV. is the scene of the romance of the Chevalier d'Auriac, whose love-story is perilously entangled with those plots against the king, in which the Marshal de Biron and the Duc de Tremouille were ring-leaders. Henry himself, Sully, and other nobles of the court are introduced, and the assassin Ravaillac is seen as one of the tools of the conspirators.

"A Galahad of the creeks" is the story of temptation bravely resisted and death heroically met The hero is a young Englishman in the Indian Civil Service; posted as assistant commissioner he is practically Governor of Pazobin in lower Burma, lying near the sea on a slimy creek of the Irawadi. Native character is well portrayed and the moral degeneration that overtakes the Anglo-Indian cruelly pictured. The second story has its scene in a suburb of Bombay. The widow Lamport's worthless husband, supposed by every one to be dead, returns after she has married John Galbraith, of the Methodist Tabernacle, and breaks her heart.

Yeats, W: Butler. The secret rose; il. by J. B. Yeats. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1897. 11+265 p. il. D. cl., $2.

A collection of sixteen prose romances dedicated to A. E., the author of "Homeward songs by the way," who, the author says, "has moulded a spiritual ecstasy into verse and can sympathize with the sorrows and ecstasies of the personages of the book." The author believes that poetry and romance can be made only "by looking into that little, infinite, faltering, eternal flame that one calls oneself." These subjective visions are truly poetic, and their setting is chiefly amid Irish nature.

Incidents that happened from 1887-'97 in the parishes of Uphill and Downhill, England, during the celebrating of the last two jubilees of Queen Victoria, are described. The characters of the story are introduced while honoring their Queen at the rustic games. The victor on one of these occasions is the hero of an old-fashioned love-story.

Yonge, Charlotte Mary. The pilgrimage of the Ben Beriah. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1897. 9+321 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The forty years' wanderings of the Ben Beriah (Tribe of Ephraim) before the deliverance of Israel from the bondage of Egypt are described in a story which gives prominence to the passing over the Red Sea, the fall of Manna, the springing of water from the rock, and other miracles performed by Moses during the exodus. Account is also given of the attack of the Amalekites, the founding of the Tabernacle, the instituting of the sacrifice of the paschal lamb, and finally the fate that befell Moses within sight of the Promised Land.

Young, Ja. T. Administrative centralization and decentralization in England. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1897.] 40-57 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 208.) pap., 25 c.

Since the beginning of the present century certain important internal changes have been wrought in the character of England's local organization, and these changes, while tending toward a further development of local institutions, have also been marked by a pronounced and unmistakable tendency toward centralization. The successive steps of these changes are shown in an instructive way by the present essay.

Zimmern, Alice. Old tales from Greece. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1897. 10+296 p. il. S. (The children's study ser., no. 1.) cl., 75 c.

Presents to youthful readers the gods and heroes who played so large a part in the thoughts and writings of the ancient Greeks. Begins with the myths of creation; following are stories of Argos, of Corinth, Athens, Thebes, of the Argonauts, of Heracles, of Troy, of the return of Odysseus and the House of Tantalus.

Zogbaum, Rufus Fairchild. "All hands": pictures of life in the United States Navy. N. Y., Harper, 1897. c. unp. il. F. cl., $5.

In a series of six double-page and thirty-seven full-page drawings, and as many smaller sketches, Mr. Zogbaum gives a vivid panorama of the life on board a U. S. warship He not only exhibits the quality of accurate and extensive observations, but enters into the spirit of the service. As one turns the pages he gets repeated object lessons of the hugeness and perfection of detail, the orderliness and intricacy of those modern fighting-machines, and catches the varying moods of the Jack-tars Here they are a crowd of grown-up children at play, there a band of stern faced men, now wildly excited over a lost race, again kindled to heroism by a man overboard or the terrible cry of fire.
